FLARES RAISE HOPES FOR MISSING PILOTS

HAWAII ISLAND IS SEARCHED AS LIGHT IS REPORTED SEEN

Planes Probe Rugged Slopes—Pilots May Have Crashed

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24.—Phantom flares and hopes drew the efforts of the United States Army and Navy farther over the Pacific Ocean today in search for the six men and one woman lost in the $35,000 Dole air race to Honolulu.

While seven destroyers were deployed along a twenty-one mile front across the great circle steamer lane between San Francisco and Hawaii, and the airplane carrier Langley and the aircraft tender Aroostook sent out sea and land planes to scout an 80-mile patch of ocean, army aircraft stationed on the Hawaiian Islands were dispatched to search the slopes of Mauna Kea, on the Island of Hawaii.

Several persons reported having seen a green flare rise and die, 8,000 feet up on the rugged mountainside Sunday night.

Major-General Edward M. Lewis, hearing the reports, ordered three of the army's airplanes to leave Luke Field, Honolulu, today, and search over the Island of Hawaii, using the Halemauau Landing Field, on Hawaii, as their base. They are expected to return to Luke Field tomorrow.

After ascertaining that no camping parties would be in the vicinity where the flare was seen, Captain E. R. Block, commander of the Kilauea military camp, informed Major-General Lewis of the light.

It was deemed to be entirely possible that one of the Dole planes might have swung south of its course and, unaware it had reached the Hawaiian chain of islands, crashed against Mauna Kea, the loftiest peak in the islands, 13,000 feet high.

Injured, or marooned on a crag, the fliers only could call help with their flares.

Residents of Hilo also reported having seen the flare. A green light that rose from the mountainside, glimmered and then died in twenty seconds.

So far as the navy's Hawaiian headquarters is concerned the search for the fliers ended today, except for the activities of two seaplane patrols operating over the same area northward of a line between the islands of Oahu and Kauai which was covered yesterday.

The submarine tender Holland and her submersibles returned to Pearl Harbor, refueled, reprovisioned and waited. This left the Sunnadin and Pelican the only naval ships out.

COURT CRITICIZES UNDERTAKER WHO IS HELD FOR CONTEMPT

Tactics Of Morticians Will Be Probed By Association

DAYTON, O., Aug. 24.—In continuing the contempt of court case against C. E. West, mortician, growing out of his alleged failure to obey the orders of Judge Robert C. Patterson in the burial of the body of Orestes H. Webb, 75, the jurist today took occasion to criticize the undertaker for having removed the body from the city.

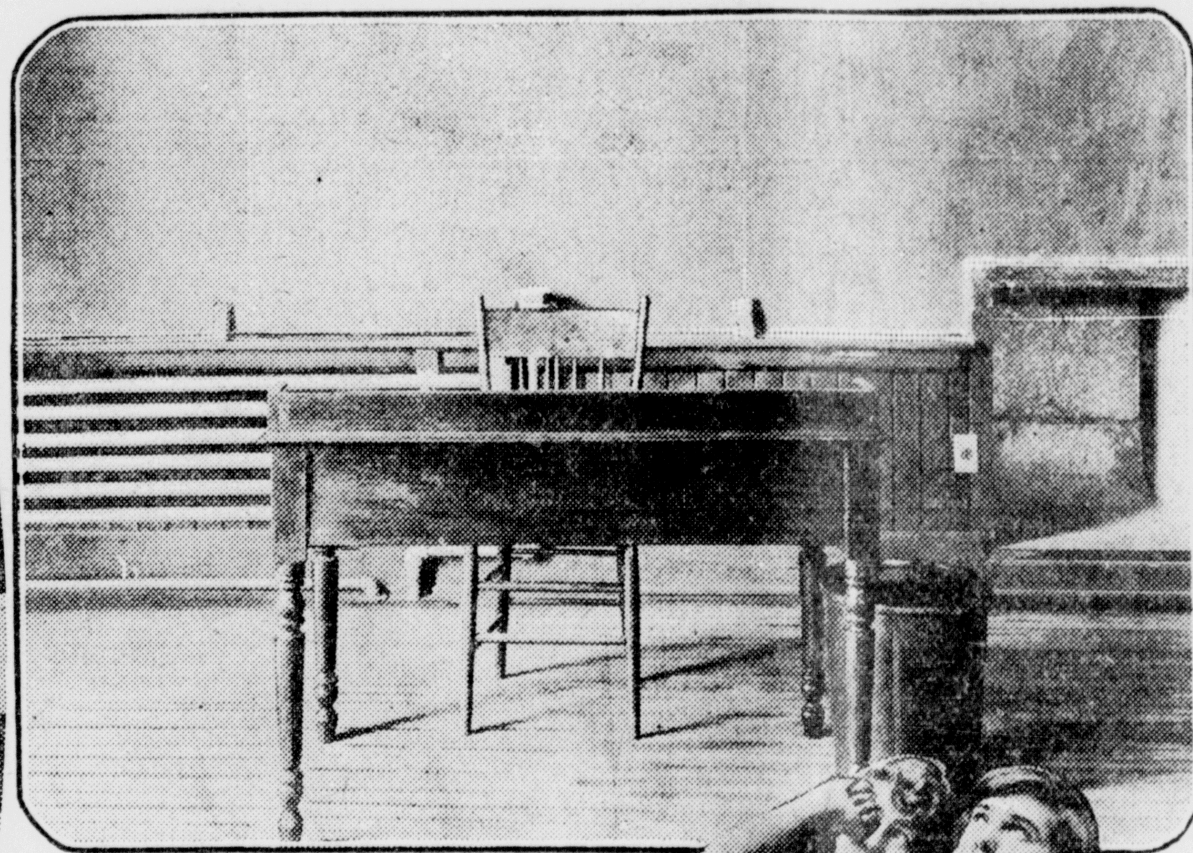

Continuance was granted when it was announced that an investigation of tactics employed by certain morticians in Montgomery County might result from the controversy.

Edward Hoynes, President of the Undertakers' Association in this district, indicated to the court that an immediate meeting of the officers of that organization would be called, and later the matter would be referred to the association as a whole.

In his order, continuing the case, Judge Patterson said greater good could be accomplished if proper action is taken by the Undertakers' Association.

"If the association countenances such conduct," said the Court, "then it deserves the same condemnation as the defendant has received in this matter."

PUPILS OF FLYING SCHOOL TEACHER TELL HOW THEY LOVED HER

Members Of Family Principal Beneficiaries Of Will—Eight Scholarships Provided—Fixes Trust Fund For Church

MINEOLA, N. Y., August 24.—The widow and two married daughters are principal beneficiaries under the will of Elbert H. Gary, former Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation.

The will makes specific bequests of more than $2,500,000, including eight of $50,000 each for the establishment of "Elbert H. Gary scholarships" at smaller colleges and universities, and one of similar amount for maintenance of the Gary Memorial Church at Wheaton, Ill.

No definite indication is given as to the total value of the estate, that variously has been estimated at from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Having made the bequests and provided for division of the revenue equally between the widow and the daughters, Mr. Gary devised an eighth section of the nineteen-page document to giving to the beneficiaries advice gained from his many years in business.

It is evident that the industrial leader, who died in New York City August 15, sought to prevent dissipation of the estate through unwise investments and unsound policies.

The institutions named in the scholarships are McKendree College at Lebanon, Ill.; University of Pittsburgh, at Pittsburgh; Lafayette College, at Easton, Penn.; Trinity College, at Hartford, Conn.; Lincoln Memorial University, at Harrogate, Tenn.; Syracuse University at Syracuse, N. Y.; Northwestern University, at Chicago, and New York University, at New York City.

The widow, Mrs. Emma T. Gary, is given life use of the Gary home, "Ivy Hall," near Jericho, L. I., and the income from one third of the residuary estate. Each of the daughters, Gertrude Gary Sutcliffe and Bertha Gary Campbell, received the income from trust funds of $800,000 and the income of one-third the residuary estate. A granddaughter, Julia Elizabeth Clark and a grandson, Elbert Gary Sutcliffe, receive the income from trusts of $300,000 each.

YOUTH ARRESTED IN MURDER OF MOTHER

STREATOR, Ill., Aug. 24.—Elaborate preparations for the defense of Harry Hill, the former Streator high school cheer-leader now wanted for the murder of his mother, Mrs. Eliza Hill, was begun even before the decomposed body of his mother was unearthed from its shallow grave in the basement of the Hill mansion by Chief of Police William Robb.

This fact was disclosed today when it was announced that Attorney W. J. Jones and former Judge Russell C. Osborn had been retained by Dr. Harry C. Hill, the boy's father, to look out for his interest. It was Attorney Jones who accompanied the father and Dr. G. A. Discus on the initial search of the house when the newly-made grave was discovered after which the police were called in and the body disinterred by the chief.

Both the girl and her companion, Leonard Stine, 352 Ludlow Ave., Springfield, identified the man. Boltz is married and has a child. He attempted to evade arrest by hiding in weeds when the posse organized after the girl's kidnapping was reported, sought him in the woods.

CLARENDON, O., Aug. 24.—Bernard E. Morgan, 71, consulting traffic officer of the Nickel Plate Railroad and formerly traffic manager, is dead.

PRINCE WOUNDED; DEATH EXPECTED

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Prince George, brother of King Alexander of Yugoslavia, has been severely wounded and there is little hope of his recovery, according to a central news dispatch from Vienna today quoting a telegram received in Vienna from Belgrade.

Prince George was born in Belgrade on Sept. 8, 1887, the son of King Peter. As the result of his fondness for convivial life and boon companionship, he was compelled to renounce his right of succession to the throne on March 27, 1909.

SPRINGFIELD GIRL KIDNAPED; POLICE ARREST ASSAILANT

Roughly Dressed Auto Driver Object Of General Search

SPRINGFIELD, O., Aug. 24.—Kidnaped and kept prisoner for several hours last night by a bearded, roughly dressed motorist, Esther Sharpe, 15, was at her home today suffering from the effects of her experience followed by hours spent tramping country roads and sleeping on porches in her wild flight to freedom.

Harry Boltz, 27, Home Road and Belmont Ave., Springfield, is being held by Clark County authorities and is said to have confessed to kidnapping the girl and attempting to assault her. He held her captive three hours and left her on Villa Road. He will face a charge of attempted criminal assault.

Both the girl and her companion, Leonard Stine, 352 Ludlow Ave., Springfield, identified the man. Boltz is married and has a child. He attempted to evade arrest by hiding in weeds when the posse organized after the girl's kidnapping was reported, sought him in the woods.

ARREST SUSPECTS IN KIDNAPING-ROBBERY OF SHELBY COUNTY TREASURER THERE ON JULY 20

SIDNEY, O., Aug. 24.—George W. Shaw, 39, Canton, and Mary Anderson, 24, Piqua, are in jail here as suspects in the kidnapping and robbery of Fred Berry, Shelby County treasurer, of $37,000 in county funds July 20.

They were arrested last night in Hebron, Licking County, midway between Columbus and Newark, by two Springfield detectives, the town marshal of Hebron and the town constable. They were lodged in the Licking County jail at Newark and later brought here by Sheriff S. E. Dilbone.

County authorities here refuse to discuss the arrests or to state on what evidence they acted. The county prosecutor admitted that Detectives Leroy Zell and Kenneth Norris of Springfield, had been employed by the county and had been trailing the suspects ever since the robbery.

Treasurer Berry in reporting the robbery said that he had been kidnapped about 9 o'clock in the morning as he was taking tax collection to a bank for deposit. He said he was kidnapped by two persons in a large touring car.

Driven far out into the country, he said his captors, after taking the funds, which consisted of $12,000 cash and $25,000 in checks, bound and gagged him and dumped him from the machine. He managed to make his way to a farm house after freeing himself of his bonds, and telephoned authorities.

TOWN FOR SALE

MANCHAUG, Mass., Aug. 24.—This deserted village went on the auction block today.

Abandoned in 1921 by B. B. and R. Knight, Inc., and visited since by a devastating fire, the company's entire property, consisting of seventy-four houses, three mills, a large farm, wood tracts and meadow land, went under the hammer to the highest bidder.

The village was founded in 1826 by Knight, Inc., for manufacturing purposes. It was a thriving industrial community until 1921, when the post-war collapse forced the closing of the mills.

It is estimated that the sale of the seventy-four parcels, outside of the three mills, will bring $50,000.

ENTIRE CHICAGO BLOCK WIPED OUT BY MYSTERIOUS FLAMES

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—One entire block of stores and apartment buildings, located in the heart of Chicago's Latin quarter, was almost completely wiped out early today in a mysterious explosion and fire that followed in its wake.

The scene was Taylor Street between Marshallfield Ave. and Paulina St. The section that has been in constant turmoil recently as a result of Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations.

Two business houses were leveled by the blast and fire which broke out immediately spread to twelve apartment buildings. Firemen and police are searching the ruins for bodies. It is not known whether there was any loss of life.

Authorities, after a hasty investigation, were unable to determine whether the blast was due to a bomb, possibly set by anarchists as a protest to the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, or was due to some other cause.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Miss Millicent Rogers, the former Countess Salm, accompanied by her fiancé, Arthur Ramos, wealthy Argentinean, arrived here last night on the liner Olympic.

"Absolutely!" was the emphatic reply when asked if she was engaged to Ramos. She declined, however, to discuss her future plans.

Ramos, who appeared to be tall, lean and bronzed, like the proverbial Englishman of Colonial habits, was equally vague.

First Story Of Miss Doran Comes From Caro, Mich.

By WILLIAM H. RITT
Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The Evening Gazette

CARO, Mich., Aug. 24.—Thirty-three small girls and boys have bowed each night at their bed-sides to pray. The prayer always has been the same—a request to God from the fifth grade, Caro consolidated school, that He return to the school children their teacher, Miss Mildred Doran, the "flying school m'am," lost over the Pacific, together with John Auggy Pedlar and Lieut. V. R. Knope in the Hawaiian flight plane Miss Doran.

The fifth grade has been certain that Miss Doran would return as smiling and happy as the day she departed in June, when she kissed the little girls goodby and patted the boys on their shoulders. The fifth grade has been certain Miss Doran would "be all right." But the fifth grade hasn't been taking any chances. Hence the prayers.

A GREAT SCOOP
Central Press and The Evening Gazette sent a staff correspondent to pass a few days in the small town of Caro, Mich., with the pupils of Miss Mildred Doran, lost flying school teacher. He has obtained not only the first interviews and impressions in the town, but the first and exclusive pictures. Another dispatch will follow with more pictures.

Sure of Her Return
"Oh, I just know Miss Doran will come back," said Maxine, age 10, a slim, small brunette, sitting on the front step of Caro consolidated school staring into the sky. "You know God wouldn't let a nice lady like Miss Doran get drowned that way. I'll bet they find her today."

Little blonde Maxine Stovel, 11, Iva's chum, felt sure that Miss Doran was the best teacher who ever had been hers.

"I'll never forget the picnic she gave us last June," said Maxine. "It was a dandy. And the day Miss Doran left she was in a big automobile. She looked so sweet and pretty that I guess I cried a little because she was going."

"Even the Boys Pray."
"You know Miss Doran never got mad. The only time she ever bawled me out was when I whispered. She hardly ever spanked anybody. I mean, I can tell you."

"Everybody wants Miss Doran to come back," broke in Iva. "We pray for her every night. Even the boys pray."

ARMY ORDERS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Second Lieutenant Paul M. Lyons, Air Corps Reserve, Dayton, Ohio, will report at Wright Field, Ohio, for a two weeks' training, effective August 28.

First Lieutenant John P. Richter, Air Corps, has been relieved from duty at Fairfield Air Depot, Fairfield, Ohio, and assigned to the material division, McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio.

MILICENT BACK; ADMITS BETROTHAL

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Miss Millicent Rogers, the former Countess Salm, accompanied by her fiancé, Arthur Ramos, wealthy Argentinean, arrived here last night on the liner Olympic.

"Absolutely!" was the emphatic reply when asked if she was engaged to Ramos. She declined, however, to discuss her future plans.

Ramos, who appeared to be tall, lean and bronzed, like the proverbial Englishman of Colonial habits, was equally vague.

"Oh, we'll just hop in a cab and ride about a bit," he said.

With the former Countess was her son Peter, a nurse and a maid.

Neither Ramos nor the former Countess had decided, he said, when and where they would be married.

Colonel H. H. Rogers, the former Countess's father, was not at the pier. Her mother still is in Europe.

THOUSANDS HURT IN PARIS OUTBURSTS; POLICE ARE VICTIMS

Communists Raid Clubs, Doing Damage Estimated At $500,000—Battle With Gendarmes—Embassy Guarded

PARIS, Aug. 24.—Unofficial estimates today placed the number of injured in last night's communist rioting as high as 1,000, including 100 policemen. Most of the demonstrators were only slightly injured, suffering mainly from bruised heads. The property damage is placed at $500,000.

PARIS, Aug. 24.—Order was restored here by the police early today after more than 1,000 persons, 100 of them policemen, had been injured in violent rioting by 10,000 Socialists, communists and anarchists in protest against the Sacco-Vanzetti executions in Boston.

No Americans were injured, although a number of night clubs in the Montmartre district frequented by Americans were raided by communists.

Rioters battled fiercely with the police in the Boulevard Sebastopol where they tried to erect a barricade to hold back the gendarmes. Soldiers and police guarded the United States embassy and the demonstrators were not allowed to approach within half a mile of the building.

It was the worst rioting Paris has known since the war.

Between 200 and 250 persons were arrested.

Shouting: "Down with the Americans," anarchists and communists broke into theaters and raided cafes, smashing furniture and crockery and driving out the patrons.

AMERICAN MARINES KILL NICARAGUAN BANDITS IN BATTLE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Two Nicaraguan bandits were killed in a fight between Nicaraguan outlaws and American marines joined by members of the constabulary of that country, the Navy department was advised today by Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, commander of the United States special service squadron operating there.

A band of about thirty Nicaraguan outlaws, in ambush, fired upon a small detachment of marines commanded by First Sergeant Thomas G. Bruce.

An officer of the Nicaraguan constabulary and a few members of that force were accompanying the marines. A man named Alexander, an American mine owner, also was in the group. They had left Jicar for Murro on August 16 when the surprise attack occurred, according to the report.

The marines suffered no casualties. The report forwarded by Admiral Sellers did not say whether the constabulary suffered any losses. There were about thirty bandits in the attacking party.

Indications are that General Augusto Sandino, rebel bandit leader, has left the country and is in hiding with a small number of men, Admiral Sellers said. His report continued:

"Conditions are steadily improving. General Luis Moncada on his return from an airplane trip to Ocotral reported several small bands in Segovia, composed and led by criminals. These bands refused to surrender, but can be subdued by forces of sufficient strength."

"On the outward march to Jicar, Mayor Floyd reports that none of the houses or towns were occupied, but on his return these same houses or towns were occupied, or people about them were at work."

"I believe the critical period of pacification is past. Police work is all that will be required, as the country is entering this peaceful period."

ASKS REMOVAL OF SHERIFF, SQUIRE

MONROE, Mich., Aug. 24.—Specifying several charges, including graft, neglect of duty, drunkenness and attempted bribery, Circuit Judge George W. Sample, of Ann Arbor, today sent a petition to Governor Fred W. Green asking removal from office of Sheriff Joseph Kinsey and Justice Fred Schepeler, of Monroe County.

The petition was made public by Judge Sample, who has been conducting a one-man grand jury investigation here.

Charges against Schepeler include the allegation that he frequented blind pigs, was seen when in an intoxicated condition in his office, that he had tipped off blind pig operators and that he had attempted to bribe a member of the state police.

Sheriff Kinsey is accused of graft, having disposed of confiscated property, having levied tribute from liquor runners, having allowed disorderly houses to operate and having committed perjury in the statement of his campaign expenses.

REPORT SHOWS 33 CRIPPLED CHILDREN

There are thirty-three crippled children between the ages of 1 and 21 years in Greene County, according to a certification made to the juvenile court by the county auditor. The list is compiled from the annual enumeration of youth of school age. Eighteen of the crippled children live in the county and fifteen are residents of Xenia.

MAKING THE COUNTRY ALLURING

In an earnest appeal to the retired farmer to remain and keep his savings in the country, where both can do far more good than in the city, William M. Jardine, secretary of agriculture, confesses that the fault is not with the emigrating farmer but with the country.

Efforts to stem the exodus from the farm must include giving farmers the benefit offered by city life. If rural life offered the highest living standards and other benefits of urban life the exodus would be in the other direction.

The rural community loses heavily when families that have "made their pile," little or great, sell the farm and move to town or city. That accumulated wealth goes to build up the city and its business. And by remaining in the country the well-to-do family could do much to raise the standard of living in its community.

Secretary Jardine says "we must assist the rural communities to achieve the highest possible standard of living on their income." And that is just what has been going on since the discovery of the farm exodus.

Electricity is one of the benefits of city life, but 350,000 farms in the United States are already enjoying the advantages of electric power and labor-saving devices. The living standard has been raised by electricity in 350,000 rural homes.

Good roads and the automobile have brought to the farm door the pleasures, amusements, cultural gifts and social benefits of the city. The farmer of today is not compelled to retire with the chickens for lack of anything else to do.

WHY SPREAD GLOOM

Maybe you never thought about it, but a cheerful letter is a fine tonic, and it is just as easy to write a cheerful letter as a gloomy one. Of course, some of us are better writers than others, but there is no reason why the ordinary letter can not be more cheerful, there is no good reason why the ordinary writer, or the poor writer, can not sound a cheerful note when writing the ordinary letter.

Cheer is a big thing. The clever writer of a business letter studies the scientific meaning of the word; he knows all about it—psychologically and temperamentally. The bulk of a business letter may be purely matter-of-fact in text, yet somewhere, the clever writer will sound the cheerful note that leaves a splendid taste in the mouth of the reader.

You are always glad to receive letters from some people. Why? The answer is that you know their letters are cheerful, that these writers have a way of telling things without the gloomy aspects, and—well, you just feel good over hearing from them, that's all. Again, there are some people who seemed determined to look altogether on the dark side of everything and their views are invariably reflected in the letters they send out to their friends and their business correspondents.

A cheerful letter is like a beacon light to a weary traveler who has lost his way.

The Way of the World

THE PATH OF LAW

A fanatic in a Louisiana town let a poisonous snake bite him to prove that no harm could come to a "child of God." But at last report his arm was badly swollen and he had lost the use of his hand. When natural law was put into effect the Creator doubtless assumed that human beings would have intelligence enough to obey it. The stupid and the fanatical must prove great disappointments to the Creator.

TRAINING

Thompson, Jr., who succeeded his father at the head of a chain of restaurants, is a graduate of two universities. But when his father put him in the restaurant business he put him to washing dishes. Later young Thompson was promoted. He was allowed to serve beans, doughnuts and coffee over the counter. The elder Thompson believed in colleges and the background of education that comes from college training. He also believed in learning your own business from the bottom up. It's a winning combination.

LEST WE FORGET

The Great War began 13 years ago. It was once called a war to end war. Several nations of the world appear to have forgotten that. Let us not be too weary of figures to keep a few in mind. They make us less indifferent about the policies that may lead to another war.

At the end of the Great War there were just under 10 million known dead. There were just under 3 million presumed dead. There were six and a quarter millions seriously wounded. There were 14 millions otherwise wounded.

MAKING SCIENCE POPULAR

A pin head is a platform big enough for the performance of a whole troupe of disease germs. The microscope and motion picture camera now disclose the growth and behavior of little organisms too small to be seen by the naked eye. Such pictures are more interesting than some of our best comedies.

We are finding ways of popularizing science. It is a good sign.

Songs of a Housewife

BY MARJORIE K. RAWLINGS

A KITCHEN ARTIST

(Suggested by Mrs. Elizabeth G. M.)

WHEN I do fancy baking
My tidiness takes flight
I dirty every dish I own—
My kitchen is a sight.

In my creative frenzy
I use up every pan;
I strew things here and yon and make
The biggest mess I can.

Do artists at their canvases
Pause to clean the room?
Do sculptors at their modeling
Keep one hand on the broom?

I claim the same forbearance
In time of pastry trial.
I am a kitchen artist—
I cannot cramp my style!

Household Hints

MENU HINT

Scallops are shellfish. They range in size from a hickorynut to a small apple, but are usually the former size. The shell is a beautiful one, ribbed and veined in red and purple. The large shells were early used as dishes in which to bake oysters, fish and vegetables, and from this custom comes the term "scallopiped."

Escalloped Scallops
Baked Potatoes Stewed Tomatoes
Apple Pie Cheese
Coffee

TODAY'S RECIPES

Escalloped Scallops—Pick over and wash a pint of scallops; drain and dry between towels. Mix together one cup of cracker crumbs and one-half cup stale bread crumbs. Put a thin layer in the bottom of a buttered shallow baking dish, cover with a layer of scallops, sprinkle with salt and pepper and add a tablespoon of cream and one of milk. Put a second layer of crumbs, scallops and seasonings as before, including the milk and cream, and lastly a layer of crumbs. Dot with butter and bake for thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Never plan a third layer of scallops. Only two layers will bake through evenly. Three hard-boiled eggs chopped and mixed with the top layer of crumbs, makes a nice variation to this dish.

Bouillon is a clear brown meat stock served as soup. It is usually served in cups to keep it hot.

SUGGESTIONS

Peas and Bread
Cut slices of day-old bread rather thick. Scoop out center, being careful not to break or tear. Place in oven and toast to nice brown. Take liquid from can of peas and heat. Blend one tablespoon of flour and one of butter, add water to make smooth like cream. Cook this with liquid until well done. Add peas and fill bread cups and serve hot with any meal. Especially nice with chicken. Crust of bread can be used for dressing with roast meat or saved by placing in oven until nice and brown.

Sparkling Cruets.
To clean stained cruets, half fill with hot soapsuds to which one teaspoonful of baking soda has been added. Drop in some broken egg shells and let stand for an hour, shaking now and then. Rinse with hot water and dry.

Frozen Orange Whip.
Try this on your family. Take one cup sugar, two-thirds cup water, one-quarter cup orange juice, one pint heavy cream, grated rind two oranges.

Boil sugar and water until syrup will thread when dropped from spoon; add grated rind and orange juice. Cover and keep warm for one hour, then cool. Beat cream until stiff and add gradually the orange syrup.

Take two whole oranges, cut in half crosswise and remove pulp and separate into small pieces. Pour juice into brick mold, then put in alternate layers of cream and orange pulp until mold is filled. Adjust cover and pack in salt and ice. Let stand two hours before serving.

FRIED CAKES
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)
Beat two eggs very light, add one cup granulated sugar, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon melted butter, one cup sweet milk, nutmeg or vanilla to flavor, one tablespoon baking powder, flour to roll out soft as you can handle. Fry in deep, hot fat.

DO YOU NOTICE COLORS?

Considering how much of it there is about us, the average person has a surprisingly scant knowledge of color. We know less about color than we do about music, yet we see color hundreds of times as often as we hear music.

One may have observed that almost any man looks better in a suit of blue than in any other color. The reason is that the blue of the garment accentuates the combination of yellow and red in the complexion. Blue is the opposite color to complement of yellow-red. Colors which are opposites neutralize each other if mixed together, but when placed side by side, one enhances and strengthens the other. Hence, whatever color is in the face becomes more noticeable when we wear blue—and as most of us have too little rather than too much color, anything which heightens it helps just that much.

One sometimes wonders why a man in a gray suit often looks as if he were on his way to a hospital. It is because gray reflected against his perhaps already pale complexion makes him look ghastly.

White shoes make the feet look larger than black ones, because they reflect more light. It is the same principle as playing a spotlight on the leading lady in a musical comedy.

One could not easily estimate the value of color in business establishments. Sometimes you like a restaurant without knowing why. The answer may lie in the harmonious color scheme. Arthur S. Allen, one of the foremost authorities on the proper selection of color for business uses, was to criticize a show window that contained a display of negligee shirts. Each shirt had been placed against a background of rich purple velvet. Allen inquired:

"Which are you trying to sell, the velvet or the shirts? If the shirts, why attract people's eyes away from their modest colors to the brighter-colored velvet?"

I distinctly recall that when a small boy, I fell in love with a young woman many years older than myself—chiefly because of her beautiful complexion. I remained in love with her for several days. Then I chanced to see her with her hat off and discovered that her cheeks were drab. The under brim of her hat had been lined with pink!

I wonder how many men make foolish marriages because women are clever at using rouge, lipstick or other color devices to make themselves more attractive than they really are.

How to Achieve Beauty

CARRYING THE SUMMER SPIRIT THROUGH THE YEAR

For everyone summer is a playtime. We have vacations, trips to the country or beach, back-to-nature escapades from civilization and through it all there is the spirit of fun and abandon and activity. Even our work we carry on with more of a play spirit, getting fun out of it, still without neglecting it.

We get a great deal of exercise and relaxation, both mentally and physically, which are of untold value from a beauty point of view.

Make one of the resolutions for your beauty's New Year to carry this spirit through the winter. One of the best helps is a hobby—some sport you can indulge in all through the year. Swimming is one of the most beneficial pastimes there is, for every muscle in the body is brought into play. Dancing, the indoor gymnasium games, golf, whenever the weather permits, help a great deal to keep you in trim. And to those for whom such outlets are not available, there are always the long walks. Wherever you live, you can find interesting walks. Take them in the spirit of adventure, of exploring new places, or focus your attention on keeping a perfect posture and developing a graceful, rhythmic swing to your gait. Never take your walks in the spirit of punishment, of something you have to do whether you want to or not, because then you will unconsciously droop, your gait will lag, and you will lose the great benefits that might be yours.

Consider what type of exercise is most pleasing to you and most easily available. Then make it a positive part of your fall schedule and let nothing interfere with it. You will find that the stimulation to your circulatory system, bringing up the blood to the surface of your skin, is most beneficial in washing away the under-

My Dear Followers:

When sending for material which we offer you, please remember to enclose a STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED envelope bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must enclose TEN cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of this paper. Make them as brief as possible, NOT OVER 200 WORDS, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible, if they are of general interest. Don't forget the STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE if you expect me to send you the information I have offered.—Lulu Hunt Peters.

WE'LL SUE HIM FOR DAMAGES!

"Who is this? Promise you won't tell? Cross your heart? Very well, then—THIS IS THE AUTHOR OF THE BOOK."

This little catechism, followed by the picture of an exceedingly comical-looking fat woman, ended a recently published funny column by H. I. Phillips. It was on counting calories to keep weight down. All of the followers who saw it immediately thought of me and had a good laugh over it, as I did, and many of them sent it to me, for fear I had not seen it.

I know that a lot of you wondered if Phillips had drawn a correct picture of me. No; ZouZou's. No! I did weigh at one time almost seventy-five pounds more than normal (but not since I wrote the book) and I freely confess to you in the column that occasionally I take a little run up. Last summer, for instance, on my European trip, I gained almost twenty-five pounds, but, honest, I didn't look like that picture!

And while I still harbor ten pounds more than I should, I am tall, and the weight is well distributed, so that I don't look overweight with it. (Says I.) Slowly I'm getting off the ten pounds, by doing just the things I advise you to do—counting calories. And I'm getting all of the elements I need and only omitting the energy foods, which my own excess is supplying. I'm on an average of 1200 C. a day; some days I exceed it, but the next day, I go on a smaller number to even it up.

I was recently chided for not continuing to give menus to my overweight followers, so I'll give you the 1200 C. which I am following today:

Pass on to the next picture—Me, dieting.

Breakfast
2 cups of decaffeinated coffee 0C.
4 lb. average cream 100
1 1/2 domino cubes of sugar 30
2 cod liver oil tablets 0

(This is my standard breakfast now.)

Dinner
1 cup yeast extract broth 0
1 cup hot water, 1-2 t. yeast extract
Raw vegetable salad:
1-2 cup grated raw beets 25C.
1-2 cup grated raw turnips 25
9 leaves lettuce 15
1 heaping lb. cottage cheese 50
1 lb. mineral oil mayonnaise 0

3 ounces fried liver (1 1-2 slices approx. 3x2x1-2) 150
Fried in one-half lb. bacon fat 50
1 slice crisp bacon 50
1 small cup mashed summer squash 25
(baked winter squash would be four times as many C.)
1 Roman meal muffin (made from the cereal) 100
10 oz. glass skim or butter-milk 100
1 small orange 50

Tea Time
1 toasted water cracker (2 halves) 100
1-4 lb. butter 25
1 rounding t. marmalade 35
1 cup tea with 2 t. skim milk 10

(I've already had 925 C. That leaves me but 275 for the rest of the day. But I won't be hungry after such a hearty mid-day meal.) At supertime I shall have 200 C. of fruit (1 large orange and 1 large apple). Before I retire I shall take six ounces of skim milk (60 C.)

The days when I do not have a full level tablespoon butter and some cooked greens, or more cream, I always take one or two cod liver oil tablets to be sure of my vitamin A. I want you to do that, too.

If I were going out to dinner this evening, I would have had my fruit for lunch so that I could have an apparently non-dieting meal for the dinner. But with the dinner, I would have a clear soup (which counts but twenty-five C. to the cup, while a cup of cream soups counts 200) and I would have omitted the bread and potatoes and had fruit for dessert, 100 or so calories, instead of 300 to 600 C. of pastry or ice cream, etc.

If any of your friends tease you about teacher's looking like Phillips' picture, you swear 'tain't true! 'Tain't!

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDAH M'GLONE GIL

TRAGEDY

"Wouldn't I like to be that lucky girl who danced with the Prince of Wales recently?" remarked a girl in my hearing the other evening. "I would not!" tersely came from the lips of another.

"You know you do not mean that," said the first speaker. "Think of it. To dance with the Prince Charming of the twentieth century and to make such a hit that he would take you to breakfast on bacon and eggs and have you included in a day's yachting party. Surely, that girl will have something to tell her grandchildren."

"Well, if you are thinking of bedtime stories for your grandchildren well and good, but as for me, I think it would be a tragedy to be singled out by a man as wonderful as the Prince of Wales is said to be, for a day of bewildered joy and then 'feed on memories for evermore.'"

"Do you suppose that young Canadian girl will ever find in another man the glamour, the personality, the perfection, that seemed to be embodied in England's future king? 'I am sure she will not. No other youth would have such a wistful smile as curved the lips of the prince. In no other man's eyes will she see a glance that she could interpret into a longing that must be forever his. Poor girl, although she does not know it yet, she will soon learn that chance set her apart to be the entertainer of a faded youth for a day, and she will have to pay for it with wearing that crown of sorrows the poet has characterized as 'remembering happier things,' the rest of her life."

"No, I am glad it was not I that danced with the prince. I can endow a common, every-day garden variety of man with enough fascination to satisfy me, and then if something parts us I may possibly find another to take his place."

"There aren't many princes. I'll dance and flirt with some American chap, whom I might have a chance of marrying if I wished."

"There you have it," interposed Ambelle Lee. "A woman's first business is to get married and her second—"

"Does anyone know that there is a second?" softly inquired the girl who would hate to dance with the Prince of Wales, if she got a chance.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

AWAY WITH SUPERSTITION!

Some time ago one of my correspondents wrote asking my opinion about the old superstitions that so many worry about. A bird had flown into the room one day and a friend informed her that meant death in the house. Now a letter comes from a woman brought up in the atmosphere of "signs and wonders," who has proved by her own experience that such things have no bearing on life. I am printing her letter for the good it may do to those who are inclined to worry about those myths.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I would like to say a word about superstition. My grandmother was the most superstitious woman I have ever known, and most of her children and grandchildren were inclined to be that way.

"They used to cover all looking glasses and stop the clock at a death, and it was said if any one would see the departed one in the glass that one would be the next to go. Or if some one called you when they were dying, or a picture should fall from the wall, you would be taken. Well, most of these things have happened to me without any serious results. I helped prepare a friend for burial and saw her entire form in the glass. My mother called me last when she died; after my husband's death a picture of him and myself fell with a crash. That was almost four years ago, and when I was in the hospital my room was on the third floor and the birds awoke me every morning, sometimes sitting on the foot of my bed, and one even took the liberty to take a bath in a glass of water near me. No, indeed, my friends, do away with the old foggy ideas of superstition and you will get more pleasure from life.

"A Firm Believer in Truth and Facts."

Thank you so much for your fine letter and also for the kind words about the column. Your letter will do much good, I am sure.

Will L. P., who lives on Route 2, please send me her name as I am sure a letter addressed simply to her initials would prove a puzzle to the postman. I will answer her letter privately as soon as I receive the proper address.

I also have a letter for the woman signing herself "Sad Eyes," who wanted a home. She was living with her son and daughter-in-law and was unhappy. Please send me your name and address at once "Sad Eyes."

Never leave the spoon standing in the cup of tea or coffee. It is not permissible to blow a hot soup or drink to cool it. Wait until it is sufficiently cooled.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—One of the few things that lingers from the mass of information I had gleaned in grammar school, in mid-west is that "Greenwich," Connecticut, is pronounced "Green-tch." Our teacher, in awe-inspiring accents, was wont to warn us of the social leprosy that should be ours, if ever we should pronounce the word "Greenwich" in the hearing of an easterner. Yet I have never heard a trainmaster here, in the cultured east, speak the word other than "Greenwich." Moreover, a great majority of the people with whom I come in contact fall before the same error. So much for the meticulous New Yorker.

The word subway to an Englishman is interpreted as an underground passage for pedestrians. An underground railway is known simply as "the underground." It was this difference in word usage that led to a preposterous, even though true, incident.

A few days ago, a Britisher, his wife and daughter determined to go to Coney Island. They had been in New York but a short time and were numbered among those fortunate beings who had never known the thrill of riding on the subway. Asking a native the quickest way to Coney Island, our Englishman was told to take the subway.

"Topping," he remarked, for he was fond of walking. The three innocents entered a subway kiosk of the B. M. T. at 28th street. Still strong in their faith that the subway was a pedestrian's thoroughfare, they hopped off the platform and proceeded over the ties toward the 24th street station. Midway, a motorman on a southbound express, was astounded to perceive three humans walking towards his speeding train. He jammed on the air brakes, causing a near riot among the passengers, many of whom were still apprehensive of another subway bomb.

Jumping out of his cab, he rushed to the three babes-in-the-subway and guided them away from the third rail. Safe, after a moment in the subway train, the naive Englishman expressed his surprise.

"It did seem a bit queer," he vouchsafed, "walking along a dirty, rough pathway like that. But, then, we had been told to go that way, and we followed directions."

It is said that he is now wise enough to wait for a train after his unique experience.

New Yorkers are rabid customers of newspapers. So eager are they to buy their favorite sheets, that 5:30 p. m. finds newspapers dated the following morning on the stands. Every newspaper is on the press at 6 o'clock in the morning of the day on which they are to appear. This schedule holds good on weekdays, but Sunday is an exception. New Yorkers mourn the absence of the evening news-

MOTORMAN GETS HIS MAN

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The fact that Harry Oleski of Brooklyn, was operating a street car, did not stop him from getting the man whom he charged had cheated him out of $1,000. He simply increased speed until he caught up with the car ahead, where the man was sitting, pulled down its trolley, grabbed his victim, and called police.

Oleski had been promised a good job by the man if he would put up $1,000 in cash as security. That was the last he heard of the man and of the $1,000.

CONLEY IS LEADING RESERVE HITTERS; DURNBAUGH WELL UP

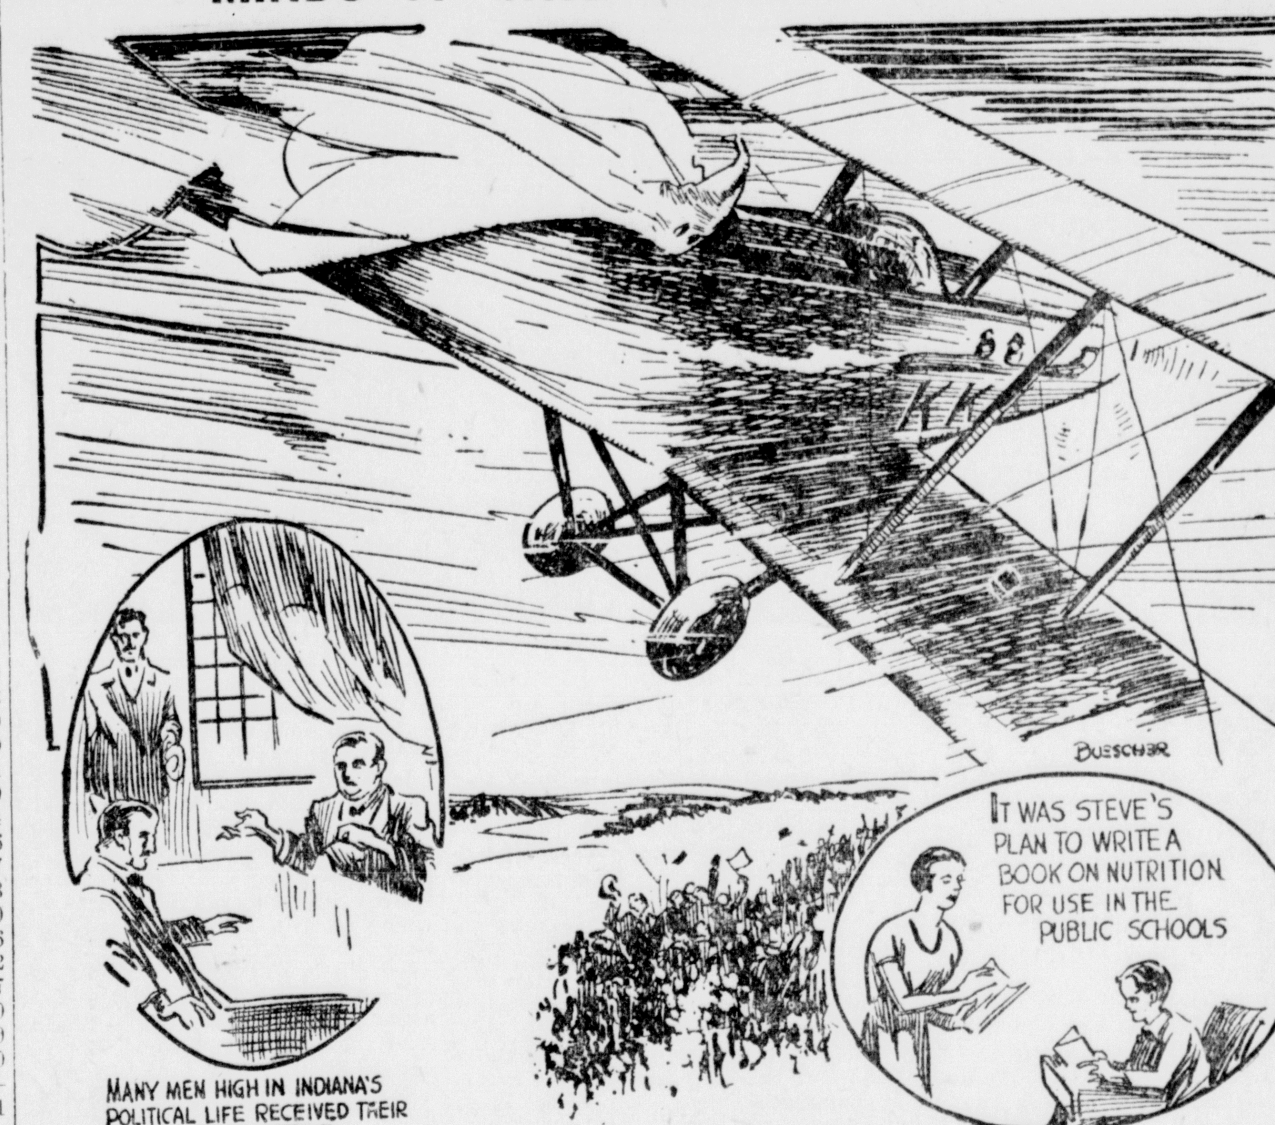

"Jug" Conley and Durnbaugh, continuing their hard hitting for the Xenia Reserves, are still leading the regular sluggers in this week's batting averages.

Although Conley's average has suffered somewhat in the last two games, he is maintaining an average of .515 this week while Durnbaugh, whose slugging has been a consistent feature of the Reserves' attack, is hitting at a .430 clip.

A slight drop in the team hitting leaves the club with an average of .331 this week. Batting averages:

PURPLE ROBED DRAGON STILL LIVING IN MINDS OF AWE-INSPIRED INDIANA FOLKS

MANY MEN HIGH IN INDIANA'S POLITICAL LIFE RECEIVED THEIR ORDERS FROM STEVE

(The story of Indiana's political drama, now unfolding, and its chief character, D. C. Stephenson, reads like a novel. This is the fifth installment.)

By BONITA WITT
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Evening Gazette

To many folk in Indiana, D. C. Stephenson, although a life prisoner convicted of murder, remains a bit supernatural.

Numerous persons predict he'll again appear "out of the sky from nowhere" as once he did.

The Stephenson plane, according to Court Asher, his pilot, was a gaily decorated affair with a silver forepart and three great flames, "K's" painted beneath. In this the grand dragon rode the clouds, as it were.

Thundering over a Klan assembly, he would land, clad in flowing purple robes, a fantastic mask over his face.

Startled crowds would stare in awe. Majestically, the grand dragon would step from the plane to the salutes of lesser dignitaries and supernumeraries. Bombs would burst high in the air.

Women would faint. Men would shout themselves hoarse.

Excited Mass of People
The assemblages were enormous.

As the grand dragon strode toward the mass of people, it is related, women tore their way to the shrouded figure, kissed the purple garments, and snatched rings and jewels from their own persons and gave them to the grand dragon.

It was no wonder a man with such a following should begin to dominate politically.

Stories are told of legislators reporting at Stephenson's office before going to the assembly, to receive "do and don't" orders. They were informed which bills the "Old Man" desired passed and which he wanted killed in committee or defeated on the floor, it is said.

Tells of Seeing Politicians Come
An Ohio man, who at one time was friendly with Stephenson, tells of visiting the latter in his Indianapolis office and seeing many men high in Indiana's political life come there to receive their "orders" from the stout little gentleman, who, while still in his early thirties, was enjoying the power of a monarch.

It wasn't exactly safe to describe "Steve" as stout in the old days when he was king, as one former Indianapolis newspaper man can testify. He and the former grand dragon exchanged several blows as the result of an article in which the writer described "Steve" as "a short stout man with rapidly thinning hair."

Perhaps the most notorious bill traced to Stephenson was one requiring the state superintendent of public instruction to prescribe a text book on nutrition for use in the public schools. On its face it appeared to be a fine bill and Stephenson's influence was not even suspected.

What Investigation Disclosed
Shortly after the passage of the bill the "nigger in the woodpile" came to light and it was none other than Stephenson.

er than D. C. Stephenson! Having taken a mail course in nutrition from a New York concern it was his plan to write the book and reap thousands in royalties, from the pockets of the parents forced to buy the book.

This bill was passed just a few days before Stephenson was arrested for murder and he never realized his ambition. At the session of the legislature, Attorney General Arthur Gilliam, recalling that the law still existed, obtained its repeal.

Admits Stephenson's Power
Indiana politicians today, although reluctant to admit that Stephenson possessed the amount of power which he says he did, confide that he controlled not only state officials but municipal officials and postmasters as well.

Ohio also felt his enthusiasm. Thousands of dollars were spent in Ohio campaigns, but Stephenson never actually gained power there, because he could not give enough time in Ohio to insure complete domination. He had a finger, however, in a goodly number of states in which he was a Klan organizer, Stephenson had a part in things political. But he was to reach his zenith in Hoosierland. (Another installment to follow in Next Issue.)

Had this act gone into effect before 1913, its date of enactment, farmers of Ohio and the nation at large might not be worrying about such pests and diseases as the Japanese beetle, Oriental fruit moth, European corn borer, chestnut blight, citrus canker and white pine blister rust.

LONDON MAN FACES HEAVY FINES AFTER PLEADING GUILTY

Pleading guilty to charges of illegal possession of liquor and reckless driving, E. A. Swaney, a garage owner at London, was fined $600 and costs on the first charge and $15 and costs on the second by Probate Judge S. C. Wright, Tuesday.

Swaney admitted being the owner and driver of an automobile which was abandoned by two men on the Jamestown Pike last Friday night when Kenneth C. Barr, county road patrolman, gave chase and also admitted ownership of the thirty-one gallons of corn liquor in the abandoned car.

Barr, who was in an automobile with Lawrence Clemmer, gave chase to the Swaney car on Lucas Hill, west of the city on the Dayton Pike, when the London machine passed his car at about forty-five miles an hour. The chase continued with the fleeing machine making about sixty miles an hour, to a point on the Jamestown pike, four miles east of the city, where two men abandoned the car leaving the motor running and escaped through a corn field.

The automobile and liquor were confiscated and held by Sheriff Ohmer Tate. The car, which is worth about $200, will be sold by the sheriff.

Swaney was identified through license plates on the automobile and was picked up in London. He was brought to Xenia Tuesday by Barr. Swaney said that it was his first plunge into bootlegging, and that he had decided to take a chance at it in order to get funds to finance his business.

Swaney furnished bond to secure payment of the fine.

NICKEL LIMIT!

That's All Smokers Need to Pay for an Ace-high Good Cigar. Read the Glad News

Some men laugh when you say "a good five-cent" cigar and spring the old one about what this country needs. Some men think of the good old days. Others say "Show me." If you are, we want you to put yourself in the "show me" class. We say there is a good cigar selling at 5c right in this town today. And here's the way to prove it.

Just step into the nearest cigar store, plunk down one nickel and take a Havana Ribbon fresh from the box. No more hunting for a good cigar at five cents. No more disappointments. You'll sign up for life with Havana Ribbon then and there, and forget about the price.

Havana Ribbon is a good cigar because it's made of carefully chosen ripe tobacco. And it's made in one of the most modern cigar factories in the world. Don't let a nickel stand between you and a real smoke treat.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

Peter's Adventures

SNAKEY'S THREE FIRST COUSINS

"Tortoise, turtle! Turtle, tortoise!" Peter was puzzled. "Why, I thought they were one and the same thing," said he. Jack-in-the-Box slowly shook his head.

"No, siree! A Tortoise and a turtle are not just alike—not by any means. And Terrapin—why, I almost forgot to mention him!" "Hum! Terrapin! Seems to me I have heard that name before." Peter was trying to remember where.

boy. "For I certainly should! Who were the three cousins, and where did they live?" "Tortoise, Turtle and Terrapin!" answered Jack-in-the-Box, promptly, and looking much pleased to think the Two-Legs really did want him to go on with his tale.

"And I don't know where they lived, 'twas so many years ago, but I am quite sure 'twas some place that was quite suited to a reptile—warm, you know, and sunny, I—"

Peter interrupted Jack-in-the-Box. "A reptile!" cried he. "Why should the three cousins choose to live with the reptiles? Ugh! Snakes! I don't like snakes. Creepy, crawly things! They make me shiver!"

"Some snakes are very handsome!" said he. "Though none of them are to be trusted! But it would never do for me or my cousins to say much about a Snake—it would be like a stone calling a rock hard! Too much alike, you know!"

Next—"An Unpopular Crowd."

WHISKERS, CUPID, BOTH WIN
ALLENTOWN, Pa.—George O'neer stood up before Judge Lobst, in domestic relations court here and swore that he loved his Valentino sideburns much too passionately to shave them off. He loved his wife, too, he declared, but if he had to choose between his wife and his whiskers, he would stick by the whiskers, against which the youthful Mrs. O'neer had entered a vigorous protest. Judge Lobst told them: (a) not to be silly, (b) to kiss, and (c) to make up.

Sally's Shoulders "HER MAN" "HONEY LOU" THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL, ETC.

READ THIS FIRST: SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who does not live with her mother. MRS. JEROME enjoys poor health, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work for MR. PEEVEY down town afternoons. Her brother, BEAU, and sister, MILLIE, give little towards the support of the home, and the financial burden falls heavily upon Sally.

In the flat below the Jerome's lives TED SLOAN, who wants Sally to marry him and keep on working. But the only man who interests her is JOHN NYE, whose real estate office is across the hall from Mr. Peevey's. Nye hires Millie as his secretary and becomes blindly infatuated with her. Millie, with the notion of marrying him, but really prefers DAVIDSON, a bond salesman, whom she met in a former job.

Beau passes some bad checks, and "borrows" some money from the bank where he works. Sally gets the money to make good his theft from Mr. Peevey, who is retiring from business because of ill health. Beau and his bride, MABEL, having spent all their earnings for such luxuries as second-hand cars and fur coats, return home to live. They pay almost no board, and Sally is free.

Then Millie has an appendicitis operation, and John Nye says for her room and nurse at the hospital. While she is there Sally does her work in Nye's office, and he offers her a permanent position. She refuses it, and goes into the restaurant business with her aunt, EMILY JEROME, who has turned her country home into a roadside inn. The business does not thrive and Sally spends most of her time at the inn, where she and Aunt Emily do all the work of cooking, serving, etc. Mrs. Jerome decides to bring the whole family there to live, and despite Aunt Emily's protests, does so.

Aunt Em hires a jazz band and tries to compete with "The Lark," a nearby roadhouse. But business is no better. One Sunday afternoon John Nye drops in, and tells Sally that if she and her aunt go to work for him again, Sally refuses, although business is bad. Ted Sloan suggests to her that she do some exhibition dancing as an attraction to draw the crowds.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER XLV

LONG after the chugging sound of Ted's little roadster had died away in the distance, Sally stayed where she was, in the night-time stillness of Aunt Emily's garden. Ted had left her with a promise to take her to "The Lark" on the next night to see the Spanish dancers who were drawing the crowds there.

But it was not of Ted she was thinking as she sat on the stone steps, with the blue branches above her, and a white moon shining down through the lace-work of leaves.

It was the kind of May night when a woman is very likely to find herself thinking of the man she loves—or of the man she loved once upon a time—or of the man whom she is going to love but never yet has happened to meet.

And so Sally found herself thinking of John Nye, and of something he had said to her that afternoon when they stood together in Aunt Emily's reception room, with its old polished furniture, its dim silver mirrors, its Toby jugs and Bristol glass.

"You belong here—not in an office," was what he had said to her.

He did not look upon her, then, as a human adding machine or a piece of office furniture, after all, Sally reflected. He saw that she was a real flesh and blood girl—the kind that fitted in among mirrors and priceless old glass and bowls of blue and lavender lilacs. The thought was oddly warming and comforting to her.

"And he said he missed me, too," she went on thinking, as she rose and started up the steps, and then, then, then, she was just because she had sharpened her pencils, and written his letters carefully, and brought him sandwiches when he was hungry. She had done the same things for Mr. Peevey, always. It was part of her job to do them—all but the sandwiches, of course.

She closed the hall door behind her and stepped into the house.

It was dark, for Aunt Emily went around these days switching off lights the minute they were not needed. She wasn't waiting a penny in this last effort to make a "go" of her dying business.

But in the reception room there was a small grate fire that sent out a sweet, smoky smell to mingle with the perfume of the lilacs.

Before the fire, leaning forward with her head sunk in her hands, sat Aunt Emily.

"Going to bed, Aunt Em?" she asked.

Not a sound from Aunt Em.

It was not Aunt Em's way to cry when she was unhappy. She simply became very silent at such times, and kept to herself a great deal.

All day she had been moping in this way, and Sally knew that things must be going very, very badly with The House by the Side of the Road.

"What's the matter, Aunt Em?" she asked in a matter-of-fact voice, for Aunt Em hated to be pitied or very nicest kind of people. . . . Now we're out for the crowds! The more the merrier—"

"I asked you if you were going to dance downstairs for those people!" repeated Mrs. Jerome with a terrible look.

Sally nodded, tossing her hair back from a satin forehead. "I certainly am!" she said. "And so's Ted Sloan! We're going to do it every night for a while, and see what happens!"

"You're no daughter of mine!" her mother said, after a long and awful pause. "You're just like your father and your Aunt Em. Wild as a goat!"

Her face crumpled up as if she were going to cry. But Sally stole her heart against that pathetic look. . . . She was going through with this thing! She hated it, but she was going to go through with it! Right to the end, whatever that end might be. It was the only thing to be done, and she was going to do it, by Jimmy Jinks!

(TO BE CONTINUED)

The World And All BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL MISUNDERSTANDINGS

Most heartbreaks come from misunderstandings. Most hatreds between man and man arise out of a lack of full expression and calm consideration of the points of view of two or more persons.

So little do we know about the souls of one another that we are constantly making one another unhappy, without any deliberate desire to do so.

Think over your own experiences. Are you not frequently misunderstanding others, and being misunderstood by others?

In divorce court, in suits at law, and in criminal cases, the word that keeps constantly popping up is misunderstanding.

And what is a misunderstanding? Let's see whether we can come at it in a way that will cover all misunderstandings.

I think a misunderstanding between two persons is a failure of one or both to see clearly what is in the mind and in the soul of the other.

We do not know one another, largely because of the difficulty we have in expressing ourselves.

Persons who are not very well acquainted do not have as many misunderstandings as those who are more or less closely in touch with one another. The reason is that chance acquaintances have little interest in what is in one another's minds. They do not expect to understand, so they do not mis-understand. The person who has few intimate relations with fellow men is apt to get through the world with the fewest misunderstandings. But also, he will have the fewest understandings. He will miss the sweet aloneness of the bitter.

Lovers, life mates and business associates have the most serious misunderstandings.

Lovers because they do not know one another's language well and are timid about saying what they think to one another.

Husband and wife misunderstand one another because they don't talk their difficulties out calmly and fully.

Business partners and associates get into court or into bickerings because they are not quite frank in telling each other that each has interests of his own, and that neither one can own or completely control any other one in the world of business.

At the root of most misunderstanding is the lack of full and complete expression on both sides. Either the parties to the misunderstanding cannot or will not express themselves fully. Its best to say it out, rather than let the venom accumulate and ferment into hatred.

The Theater

The "foreign invasion" of the American movies isn't a foreign invasion at all, but just the international exchange of ideas. This is the answer of Conrad Veidt, noted European cinema performer, now in the United States making pictures, to those who fear that the present influx of foreign stars to the American screen will tend to "Europeanize" our films.

"It is impossible to try and confine the motion picture to any locality or to any one country," says

Eleanor Boardman who, among other accomplishments, is rated one of the best "amateur" cooks in Hollywood. They say her recipe for egg salad is a bear. But then we'd eat most any dish prepared by the fair Eleanor, now wouldn't we?

Louise Dresser has been signed to appear in support of Corinne Griffith in her next picture.

Orientalism will just throng Gilda Grey's next. Both Anna May Wong, the petite Asiatic and Sojin, another Oriental, have roles in it. There'll also be a lot of lamas, Tibetan peasants, etc.

Tom Mix has made sixty-seven pictures for one producing concern which ought to be some sort of a championship.

Lois Moran has finally had her hair bobbed. After many of Hollywood's shorn beauties have returned to longer locks.

As Menelaos, husband of the beautiful but erratic Helen of Troy, Lewis Stone will appear sans the Stone mustache. Maria Corda is Helen.

WOMEN APPROACHING MIDDLE AGE

learned through their own experience the merit of this dependable medicine are enthusiastic in recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

"I had been in bad condition for three months. I could not do my work. One day I read what your medicine had done and just had a feeling that it would help me, so I sent and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had only taken half a bottle when I got up and started to do my work. It gave me an appetite, and helped me wonderfully. I can not praise this medicine highly enough. I surely will advise all women and girls to take it, and they don't have to use rouge to look healthy. My two daughters are taking it now and one is also using the Sanative Wash. I am willing to have you use this testimonial and I will answer letters from women asking about the medicine."—Mrs. HARVEY TUCKER, R. R. No. 9, Shelbyville, Indiana.

"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the little books you give away and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel better and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I feel like a different person. At anytime that I don't feel good I take the Vegetable Compound again, as I always keep a bottle on hand. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me."—Mrs. JESSIE BOLLEMAN, 611-11th St., Union City, N. J.

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women of middle age, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Those who have

Best Known and Best Beloved Newspaper Woman in America

Mrs. Gibson says women of today are more interested in personality—the thing that Elinor Glynn called "It"—that intangible thing we know as charm.

The young girl wants the truth told about her. She is not satisfied with the "My Dear, be your own dear modest little self, and you will capture the young man of your choice" for she has learned to her sorrow that the girls who get their pick among the eligible men are not the modest violets. The slogan today is—"Be Yourself"—which means do not lie to yourself. Personality plus can be acquired; but to acquire it one must have a sense of beauty, a flare for style, a great sympathy and a good deal of self-confidence without egotism. "I Have Said in My Heart" is a clearing house for woman's ideas and ideals. Mrs. Gibson's articles are not preachments—something that some narrow minded person of old fashioned ideas thinks the young girl should be. Instead they are truth as it comes from the heart of the thinking modern woman who is marching on and not standing still a moment.

FLARES RAISE HOPES FOR MISSING PILOTS

HAWAII ISLAND IS SEARCHED AS LIGHT IS REPORTED SEEN

Planes Probe Rugged
Slopes—Pilots May Have Crashed

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24.—Phantom flares and hopes drew the efforts of the United States Army and Navy farther over the Pacific Ocean today in search for the six men and one woman lost in the $35,000 Dole air race to Honolulu.

While seven destroyers were deployed along a twenty-one mile front across the great circle steamer lane between San Francisco and Hawaii, and the airplane carrier Langley and the aircraft tender Aroostook sent out sea and land planes to scout an 80-mile patch of ocean, army aircraft stationed on the Hawaiian Islands were dispatched to search the slopes of Mauna Kea, on the Island of Hawaii.

Several persons reported having seen a green flare rise and die, 8,000 feet up on the rugged mountainside Sunday night.

Major-General Edward M. Lewis, hearing the reports, ordered three of the army's airplanes to leave Luke Field, Honolulu, today, and search over the Island of Hawaii, using the Halemaumau Landing Field, on Hawaii, as their base. They are expected to return to Luke Field tomorrow.

After ascertaining that no camping parties would be in the vicinity where the flare was seen, Captain E. R. Block, commander of the Kilauea military camp, informed Major-General Lewis of the light.

It was deemed to be entirely possible that one of the Dole planes might have swung south of its course, and, unaware it had reached the Hawaiian chain of islands, crashed against Mauna Kea, the loftiest peak in the islands, 13,000 feet high.

Injured, or marooned on a crag, the fliers only could call help with their flares.

Residents of Hilo also reported having seen the flare, a green light that rose from the mountainside, glimmered and then died in twenty seconds.

So far as the navy's Hawaiian headquarters is concerned the search for the fliers ended today, except for the activities of two seaplane patrols operating over the same area northward of a line between the islands of Oahu and Kauai which was covered yesterday.

The submarine tender Holland and her submersibles returned to Pearl Harbor, refueled, reprovisioned and waited. This left the Sunnadin and Pelican the only naval ships out.

COURT CRITICIZES UNDERTAKER WHO IS HELD FOR CONTEMPT

Tactics Of Morticians
Will Be Probed By Association

DAYTON, O., Aug. 24.—In continuing the contempt of court case against C. E. West, mortician, growing out of his alleged failure to obey the orders of Judge Robert C. Patterson in the burial of the body of Orestes H. Webb, 75, the jurist today took occasion to criticize the undertaker for having removed the body from the city.

Continuance was granted when it was announced that an investigation of tactics employed by certain morticians in Montgomery County in maintaining their business may result from the controversy.

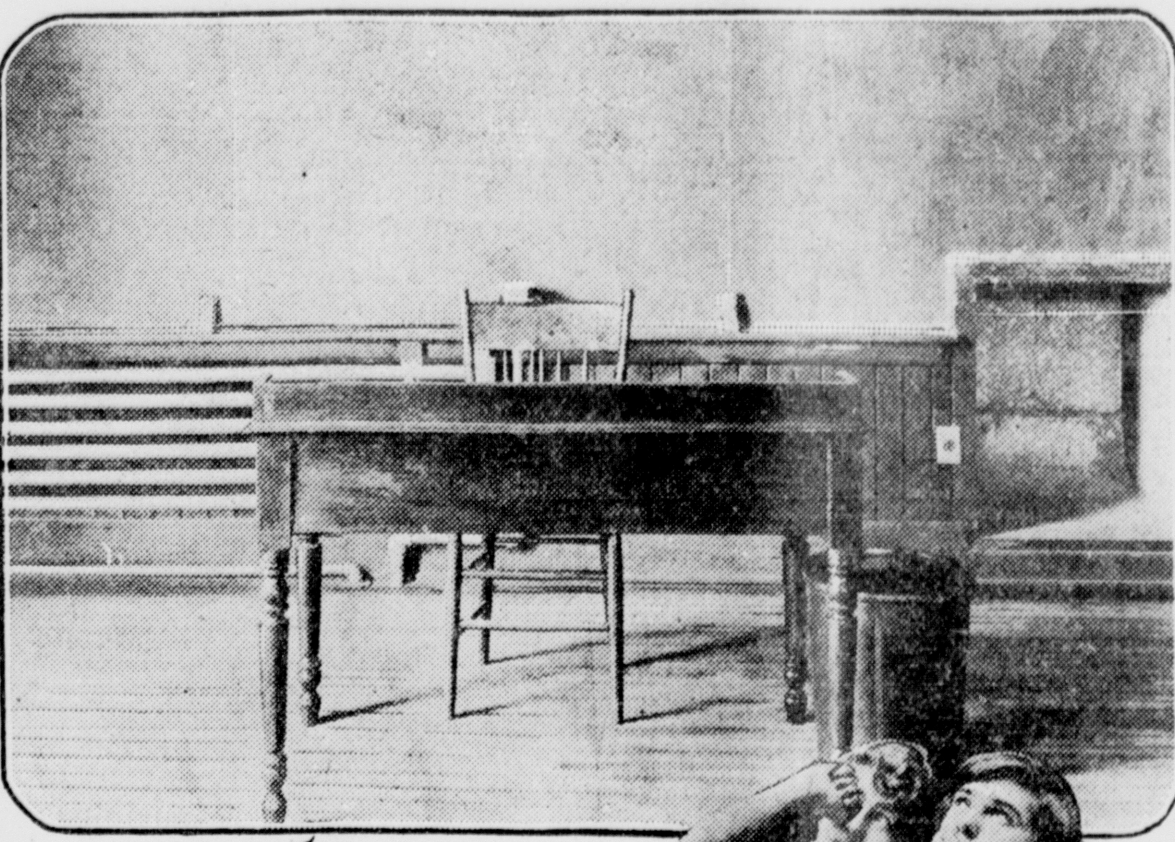

Edward Hayne, President of the Undertakers' Association in this district, indicated to the court that an immediate meeting of the officers of that organization would be called, and later the matter would be referred to the association as a whole.

In his order, continuing the case, Judge Patterson said greater good could be accomplished if proper action is taken by the Undertakers' Association.

"If the association countenances such conduct," said the Court, "then it deserves the same condemnation as the defendant has received in this matter."

Ignoring a court order to produce the body, West spirited it out of Dayton and was not found until a day later, near Bellbrook, but in Montgomery County. Decomposition is said to have started when the body was found.

Members Of Family Principal Beneficiaries Of Will —Eight Scholarships Provided—Fixes
Trust Fund For Church

MINEOLA, N. Y., August 24.—The widow and two married daughters are principal beneficiaries under the will of Elbert H. Gary, former Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation. The will makes specific bequests of more than $2,500,000, including eight of $50,000 each for the establishment of "Elbert H. Gary scholarships" at smaller colleges and universities, and one of similar amount for maintenance of the Gary Memorial Church at Wheaton, Ill.

No definite indication is given as to the total value of the estate, that variously has been estimated at from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Having made the bequests and provided for division of the revenue equally between the widow and the daughters, Mr. Gary devoted an entire section of the nineteen-page document to giving to the beneficiaries advice gained from his many years in business.

It is evident that the industrial leader, who died in New York City August 15, sought to prevent dissipation of the estate through unwisdom investments and unsound policies.

The institutions named in the scholarships are McKendree College at Lebanon, Ill.; University of Pittsburgh, at Pittsburgh; Lafayette College, at Easton, Penn.; Trinity College, at Hartford, Conn.; Lincoln Memorial University, at Harrogate, Tenn.; Syracuse University at Syracuse, N. Y.; Northwestern University, at Chicago, and New York University, at New York City.

The widow, Mrs. Emma T. Gary, is given life use of the Gary home, "Ivy Hall," near Jericho, L. I., and the income from one third of the residuary estate. Each of the daughters, Gertrude Gary Sutcliffe and Bertha Gary Campbell, received the income from trust funds of $800,000 and the income of one-third the residuary estate. A granddaughter, Julia Elizabeth Clark and a grandson Elbert Gary Sutcliffe, receive the income from trusts of $200,000 each.

Servants in the employ of the family are bequeathed $1,000 in securities for each ten years of service. To Alfred George Fletcher, Mr. Gary's chauffeur, was given in addition $100 a year for each year of service.

The residue is divided into trust funds to be shared equally by the widow and the two daughters. To the daughters is given Mr. Gary's personal belongings such as they may wish to retain on account of sentimental value, and to them also is bequeathed the Gary lot in the cemetery at Wheaton, Ill. The will directs that Mr. Gary's body be placed in a crypt of the mausoleum erected there, and that the bodies of his first wife, of his second wife, unless she directs otherwise, and of his parents and children also be placed there.

The New York Trust Company is appointed to be executor of the will and trustee. The document was signed in New York City on October 24, 1925. The witnesses were K. B. Halstead, of Brooklyn; E. J. Buffington, of Evanston, Ill., and F. R. Sites, of Manhasset.

SPRINGFIELD GIRL KIDNAPED; POLICE ARREST ASSAILANT

Roughly Dressed Auto
Driver Object Of General Search

SPRINGFIELD, O., Aug. 24.—Kidnaped and kept prisoner for several hours last night by a bearded, roughly dressed motorist, Esther Sharpe, 15, was at her home today suffering from the effects of her experience followed by hours spent tramping country roads and sleeping on porches in her wild flight to freedom.

Harry Boltz, 27, Home Road and Belmont Ave., Springfield, is being held by Clark County authorities and is said to have confessed to kidnapping the girl and attempting to assault her. He held her captive three hours and left her on Villa Road. He will face a charge of attempted criminal assault.

Both the girl and her companion, Leonard Stine, 352 Ludlow Ave., Springfield, identified the man. Boltz is married and has a child. He attempted to evade arrest by hiding in weeds when the posse organized after the girl's kidnapping was reported, sought him in the woods.

BERNARD E. MORGAN DIES
CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 24.—Bernard E. Morgan, 71, consulting traffic officer of the Nickel Plate Railroad and formerly traffic manager, is dead.

They were arrested last night in Hebron, Licking County, midway between Columbus and Newark, by two Springfield detectives, the town marshal of Hebron and a town constable. They were lodged in the Licking County jail at Newark and later brought here by Sheriff S. E. Dilbone.

County authorities here refuse to discuss the arrests or to state on what evidence they acted. The county prosecutor admitted only that Detectives Leroy Zell and Kenneth Norris of Springfield, had been employed by the county and had been trailing the suspects ever since the robbery. Treasurer Berry in reporting the robbery said that he had been kidnapped about 9 o'clock in the morning as he was taking tax collections to a bank for deposit. He said he was kidnapped by two persons in a large touring car.

Driven far out into the country, he said his captors, after taking the funds, which consisted of $12,000 cash and $25,000 in checks, bound and gagged him and dumped him from the machine. He managed to make his way to a farm house after freeing himself of his bonds, and telephoned authorities.

The couple under apprehension had been staying at a Newark hotel since July 11, registering as George W. Shaw and wife. The woman admitted her identity as Mary Anderson after lengthy questioning.

She told officials that she had been with Shaw since last Easter and that he forced her to travel with him by threatening her if she left him or told anything about him.

The couple posed as automobile insurance agents, making only the smaller cities and towns and tourist camps.

In the Newark jail the woman is said to have admitted that she once saw $5,000 pass between Shaw and another man, but to Police Chief William O'Leary she denied this, contending she never saw more than $100 in Shaw's possession. Only $41 was found in their possession.

TOWN FOR SALE MANCHAUG, Mass., Aug. 24.

—This deserted village went on the auction block today.

Abandoned in 1921 by B. B. and R. Knight, Inc., and visited since by a devastating fire, the company's entire property, consisting of seventy-four houses, three mills, a large farm, wood tracts and meadow land, went under the hammer to the highest bidder.

The village was founded in 1826 by Knight, Inc., for manufacturing purposes. It was a thriving industrial community until 1921, when the post-war collapse forced the closing of the mills.

It is estimated that the sale of the seventy-four parcels, outside of the three mills, will bring $50,000.

ENTIRE CHICAGO BLOCK WIPED OUT BY MYSTERIOUS FLAMES

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—One entire block of stores and apartment buildings, located in the heart of Chicago's Latin quarter, was almost completely wiped out early today in a mysterious explosion and fire that followed in its wake.

The scene was Taylor Street between Marshall Ave. and Paulina St. The section that has been in constant turmoil recently as a result of Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations.

Two business houses were leveled by the blast and fire which broke out immediately spread to twelve apartment buildings. Firemen and police are searching the ruins for bodies. It is not known whether there was any loss of life.

Authorities, after a hasty investigation, were unable to determine whether the blast was due to a bomb, possibly set by anarchists as a protest to the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, or was due to some other cause.

ARREST SUSPECTS IN KIDNAPING ROBBERY
OF SHELBY COUNTY TREASURER THERE ON JULY 20

SIDNEY, O., Aug. 24.—George W. Shaw, 29, Canton, and Mary Anderson, 24, Piqua, are in jail here as suspects in the kidnapping and robbery of Fred Berry, Shelby County treasurer, of $37,000 in county funds July 20.

They were arrested last night in Hebron, Licking County, midway between Columbus and Newark, by two Springfield detectives, the town marshal of Hebron and a town constable. They were lodged in the Licking County jail at Newark and later brought here by Sheriff S. E. Dilbone.

County authorities here refuse to discuss the arrests or to state on what evidence they acted. The county prosecutor admitted only that Detectives Leroy Zell and Kenneth Norris of Springfield, had been employed by the county and had been trailing the suspects ever

First Story Of Miss Doran Comes From Caro, Mich.

By WILLIAM H. RITT
Exclusive Central Press Dispatch
To The Evening Gazette

CARO, Mich., Aug. 24.—Thirty-three small girls and boys have bowed each night at their bedsides to pray. The prayer always has been the same—a request to God from the fifth grade, Caro consolidated school, that He return to the school children their teacher, Miss Mildred Doran, the "flying school ma'am," lost over the Pacific, together with John Auggy Pedlar and Lieut. V. R. Knopie in the Hawaiian flight plane Miss Doran. The fifth grade has been certain that Miss Doran would return as smiling and happy as the day she departed in June, when she kissed the little girls goodbye and patted the boys on their shoulders. The fifth grade has been certain Miss Doran would "be all right." But the fifth grade hasn't been taking any chances. Hence the prayers.

A GREAT SCOOP
Central Press and The Evening Gazette sent a staff correspondent to pass a few days in the small town of Caro, Mich., with the pupils of Miss Mildred Doran, lost flying school teacher. He has obtained not only the first interviews and impressions in the town, but the best and exclusive pictures. Another dispatch will follow with more pictures.

"Sure of Her Return"
"Oh, I just know Miss Doran will come back," said Iva Goodwin, age 10, a slim, small brunette, sitting on the front step of Caro consolidated school staring into the sky. "You know God wouldn't let a nice lady like Miss Doran get drowned that way. I'll bet they find her today."

Little blonde Maxine Stovel, 11, ivy chum, felt sure that Miss Doran was the best teacher who ever had been hers.

"I'll never forget the picnic she gave us last June," said Maxine. "It was a dandy. And the day Miss Doran left she was in a big automobile. She looked so sweet and pretty that I guess I cried a little because she was going."

"Even the Boys Pray."
"You know Miss Doran never got mad. The only time she ever bawled me out was when I whispered. She hardly ever spanked anybody though some of the boys were pretty mean. I can tell you."

"Everybody wants Miss Doran to come back," broke in Iva. "We pray for her every night. Even the boys pray."

"We all wanted her to stay," interposed brown-eyed Geraldine.

ARMY ORDERS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Second Lieutenant Paul M. Lyons, Air Corps Reserve, Dayton, Ohio, will report at Wright Field, Ohio, for a two weeks' training, effective August 28. First Lieutenant John P. Richter, Air Corps, has been relieved from duty at Fairfield Air Depot, Fairfield, Ohio, and assigned to the material division, McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio.

THOUSANDS HURT IN PARIS OUTBURSTS; POLICE ARE VICTIMS

Communists Raid Clubs, Doing Damage Estimated
At $500,000—Battle With Gendarmes—
Embassy Guarded

PARIS, Aug. 24.—Unofficial estimates today placed the number of injured in last night's communist rioting as high as 1,000, including 100 policemen. Most of the demonstrators were only slightly injured, suffering mainly from bruised heads. The property damage is placed at $500,000.

PARIS, Aug. 24.—Order was restored here by the police early today after more than 1,000 persons, 100 of them policemen, had been injured in violent rioting by 10,000 Socialists, communists and anarchists in protest against the Sacco-Vanzetti executions in Boston.

No Americans were injured, although a number of night clubs in the Montmartre district frequented by Americans were raided by communists.

Rioters battled fiercely with the police in the Boulevard Sebastopol where they tried to erect a barricade to hold back the gendarmes.

Soldiers and police guarded the United States embassy and the demonstrators were not allowed to approach within half a mile of the building.

It was the worst rioting Paris has known since the war.

Between 200 and 250 persons were arrested. Shouting: "Down with the Americans," anarchists and communists broke into theaters and raided cafes, smashing furniture and crockery and driving out the patrons.

AMERICAN MARINES KILL NICARAGUAN BANDITS IN BATTLE

Outlaws Attempt To Ambush Soldiers But Are Beaten

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Two Nicaraguan bandits were killed in a fight between Nicaraguan outlaws and American marines joined by members of the constabulary of that country, the Navy department was advised today by Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, commander of the United States special service squadron operating there.

A band of about thirty Nicaraguan outlaws, in ambush, fired upon a small detachment of marines commanded by First Sergeant Thomas G. Bruce.

An officer of the Nicaraguan constabulary and a few members of that force were accompanying the marines. A man named Alexander, an American mine owner, also was in the group. They had left Jicarero for Murro on August 16 when the surprise attack occurred, according to the report.

The marines suffered no casualties. The report forwarded by Admiral Sellers did not say whether the constabulary suffered any losses. There were about thirty bandits in the attacking party.

Indications are that General Augusto Sandino, rebel bandit leader, has left the country and is in hiding with a small number of men, Admiral Sellers said. His report continued:

"Conditions are steadily improving. General Luis Moncada on his return from an airplane trip to Ocotral reported several small bands in Segovia, composed and led by criminals. These bands refused to surrender, but can be subdued by forces of sufficient strength."

"On the outward march to Jicarero Major Floyd reports that none of the houses or towns were occupied, but on his return these same houses or towns were occupied, or people about them were at work."

"I believe the critical period of pacification is past. Police work is all that will be required, as the country is entering this peaceful period."

MILLICENT BACK;
ADMITS BETROTHAL

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Miss Millicent Rogers, the former Countess Salm, accompanied by her fiance, Arthur Ramos, wealthy Argentinean, arrived here last night on the liner, Olympic.

"Absolutely!" was the emphatic reply when asked if she was engaged to Ramos. She declined, however, to discuss her future plans.

Ramos, who appeared to be tall, lean and bronzed, like the proverbial Englishman of Colonial habits, was equally vague.

"Oh, we'll just hop in a cab and ride about a bit," he said.

With the former Countess was her son Peter, a nurse and a maid.

Neither Ramos nor the former Countess had decided, he said, when and where they would be married.

Colonel H. H. Rogers, the former Countess's father, was not at the pier. Her mother still is in Europe.

SMOKING BY CO-EDS TABOO AT WESLEYAN HOFFMAN DECLARES

Expulsion Penalty Prexy
Advises Parents In Letter

DELAWARE, O., Aug. 24.—Cigarette smoking by women students at Ohio Wesleyan University here will be followed by their expulsion from the university. President John W. Hoffman has announced in a letter he is sending to parents of all students expecting to enroll at the university in September.

A ban on student automobiles and on student marriages, which has been in effect at the university for some years is again announced to parents in President Hoffman's letter.

Ohio Wesleyan will permit its coeds to dance, however, if they will file a written request from their parents with the dean of women. No student is permitted to attend out-of-town dances.

President Hoffman's letter advises any prospective student who does not approve of the university's rules to begin his higher education elsewhere.

Smoking by women students has been forbidden and has never been a serious problem at Ohio Wesleyan, but the more drastic statement has been issued to insure that the practice will be entirely eliminated here, administrative officers of the university say in explanation of the regulation.

ASKS REMOVAL OF SHERIFF, SQUIRE

MONROE, Mich., Aug. 24.—Specifying several charges, including graft, neglect of duty, drunkenness and attempted bribery, Circuit Judge George W. Sample, of Ann Arbor, today sent a petition to Governor Fred W. Green asking removal from office of Sheriff Joseph Kinsey and Justice Fred Schopfer, of Monroe County.

The petition was made public by Judge Sample, who has been conducting a one-man grand jury investigation here.

Charges against Schopfer include the allegation that he frequented blind pigs, was seen when in an intoxicated condition in his office, that he had tipped off blind pig operators and that he had attempted to bribe a member of the state police.

Sheriff Kinsey is accused of graft, having disposed of confiscated property, having levied tribute from liquor runners, having allowed disorderly houses to operate and having committed perjury in the statement of his campaign expenses.

REPORT SHOWS 33 CRIPPLED CHILDREN

There are thirty-three crippled children between the ages of 1 and 21 years in Greene County, according to a certification made to the juvenile court by the county auditor. The list is compiled from the annual enumeration of youth of school age. Eighteen of the crippled children live in the county and fifteen are residents of Xenia.

B. P. W. CLUB PAYS HONOR TO MISS LOGAN

Miss Henryetta Logan, past president of the Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club, was paid honor by fifty members of the club, at an indoor picnic at the Parish House, Tuesday evening.

Each guest brought delicacies for a covered dish dinner, served cafeteria style, and which was thoroughly enjoyed. The tables were decked with late summer flowers, zinnias "Xenia's flower" predominating.

The outstanding feature of the program was a talk by Miss Irma Finley, who recently returned from Constantinople, Turkey, where she was engaged in Y. W. C. A. work. She told of the customs and other features of that country and exhibited souvenirs of her travels, including a Turkish woman's headdress which was displayed by a club member.

Miss Fay Ledbetter entertained the club with an account of her vacation spent at Asheville, N. C., during which she and other Xenia club members were entertained by the B. P. W. Club of that city.

Miss Logan is leaving in a few days for Granville, to take up her work in the management of the dining hall at Denison University.

PLEASANT FAMILY REUNION ON SUNDAY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Robbins, at Troy, O., was the scene of one of the most pleasant of the many enjoyable family reunions held during the season, Sunday.

OAKLAND-PONTIAC SALES AGENCY TO BE ESTABLISHED HERE

The first county-wide Greene County Oakland-Pontiac automobile agency was opened Monday by David Purdom, former Xenian, recently of Toledo and Fred Grimm, formerly of Springfield. Headquarters of the new agency will be established this week, it was announced Wednesday.

The opening of the county agency is the first direct dealership for the Oakland-Pontiac for the entire county. The firm will have associate dealers throughout the county, with Bert Long their associate dealer at Jamestown and Gene Patton at Cedarville. Agencies will also be established at Yellow Springs and Osborn. A service department will also be maintained in the county.

Mr. Purdom, son of C. D. Purdom, N. Galloway St., has been in auto sales work in Toledo four years and has been connected with the West Toledo Overland Co. there recently.

Mr. Grimm has been sales manager of the Oakland-Pontiac Co., Springfield, and has had eighteen years' experience in the auto sales game.

Grover Bales has been Xenia Oakland-Pontiac agent.

MERCHANTS TO GIVE AUTO AT CEDARVILLE

A Chevrolet Landau, offered by Cedarville merchants in a trade contest conducted there for the last five months will be awarded the winner Thursday evening.

The award will be made at a meeting in front of the village Opera House at 7 o'clock. Nineteen merchants were banded in the organization that sponsored the contest.

Tickets, valued at two cents each, were given for every dollar's worth of merchandise purchased in any one of these nineteen stores. A new Chevrolet landau was purchased by the association as the principal gift and the contest has aroused considerable interest in Cedarville and vicinity.

It is expected that a large crowd will attend the final outcome Thursday evening.

MAKING THE COUNTRY ALLURING

In an earnest appeal to the retired farmer to remain and keep his savings in the country, where both can do far more good than in the city, William M. Jardine, secretary of agriculture, confesses that the fault is not with the emigrating farmer but with the country.

Efforts to stem the exodus from the farm must include giving farmers the benefit offered by city life. If rural life offered the highest living standards and other benefits of urban life the exodus would be in the other direction.

The rural community loses heavily when families that have "made their pile," little or great, sell the farm and move to town or city. That accumulated wealth goes to build up the city and its business. And by remaining in the country the well-to-do family could do much to raise the standard of living in its community.

Secretary Jardine says "we must assist the rural communities to achieve the highest possible standard of living on their income." And that is just what has been going on since the discovery of the farm exodus.

Electricity is one of the benefits of city life, but 350,000 farms in the United States are already enjoying the advantages of electric power and labor-saving devices. The living standard has been raised by electricity in 350,000 rural homes.

Good roads and the automobile have brought to the farm door the pleasures, amusements, cultural gifts and social benefits of the city. The farmer of today is not compelled to retire with the chickens for lack of anything else to do.

WHY SPREAD GLOOM

Maybe you never thought about it, but a cheerful letter is a fine tonic, and it is just as easy to write a cheerful letter as a gloomy one. Of course, some of us are better writers than others, but there is no reason why the ordinary letter can not be more cheerful, there is no good reason why the ordinary writer, or the poor writer, can not sound a cheerful note when writing the ordinary letter.

Cheer is a big thing. The clever writer of a business letter studies the scientific meaning of the word; he knows all about it—psychologically and temperamentally. The bulk of a business letter may be purely matter-of-fact in text, yet somewhere, the clever writer will sound the cheerful note that leaves a splendid taste in the mouth of the reader.

You are always glad to receive letters from some people. Why? The answer is that you know their letters are cheerful, that these writers have a way of telling things without the gloomy aspects, and—well, you just feel good over hearing from them, that's all. Again, there are some people who seemed determined to look altogether on the dark side of everything and their views are invariably reflected in the letters they send out to their friends and their business correspondents.

A cheerful letter is like a beacon light to a weary traveler who has lost his way.

The Way of the World

THE PATH OF LAW

A fanatic in a Louisiana town let a poisonous snake bite him to prove that no harm could come to a "child of God." But at last report his arm was badly swollen and he had lost the use of his hand. When natural law was put into effect the Creator doubtless assumed that human beings would have intelligence enough to obey it. The stupid and the fanatical must prove great disappointments to the Creator.

TRAINING

Thompson, Jr., who succeeded his father at the head of a chain of restaurants, is a graduate of two universities. But when his father put him in the restaurant business he put him to washing dishes. Later young Thompson was promoted. He was allowed to serve beans, doughnuts and coffee over the counter. The elder Thompson believed in colleges and the background of education that comes from college training. He also believed in learning your own business from the bottom up. It's a winning combination.

LEST WE FORGET

The Great War began 13 years ago. It was once called a war to end war. Several nations of the world appear to have forgotten that. Let us not be too weary of figures to keep a few in mind. They make us less indifferent about the policies that may lead to another war.

At the end of the Great War there were just under 10 million known dead. There were just under 3 million presumed dead. There were six and a quarter millions seriously wounded. There were 14 millions otherwise wounded.

MAKING SCIENCE POPULAR

A pin head is a platform big enough for the performance of a whole troupe of disease germs. The microscope and motion picture camera now disclose the growth and behavior of little organisms too small to be seen by the naked eye. Such pictures are more interesting than some of our best comedies and pie comedies.

We are finding ways of popularizing science. It is a good sign.

Songs of a Housewife

A KITCHEN ARTIST

(Suggested by Mrs. Elizabeth G. M.)

WHEN I do fancy baking
My tidiness takes flight
I dirty every dish I own—
My kitchen is a sight.

In my creative frenzy
I use up every pan;
I strew things here and yon and make
The biggest mess I can.

Do artists at their canvases
Pause to clean the room?
Do sculptors at their modeling
Keep one hand on the broom?

I claim the same forbearance
In time of pastry trial.
I am a kitchen artist—
I cannot cramp my style!

Household Hints

MENU HINT

Scallops are shellfish. They range in size from a hickorynut to a small apple, but are usually the former size. The shell is a beautiful one, ribbed and veined in red and purple. The large shells were early used as dishes in which to bake oysters, fish and vegetables, and from this custom comes the term "scallop shell."

Escalloped Scallops
Baked Potatoes Stewed Tomatoes
Apple Pie Coffee Cheese

TODAY'S RECIPES

Escalloped Scallops—Pick over and wash a pint of scallops; drain and dry between towels. Mix together one cup of cracker crumbs and one-half cup stale bread crumbs. Put a thin layer in the bottom of a buttered shallow baking dish, cover with a layer of scallops, sprinkle with salt and pepper and add a tablespoon of cream and one of milk. Put a second layer of crumbs, scallops and seasonings as before, including the milk and cream, and lastly a layer of crumbs. Dot with butter and bake for thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Never plan a third layer of scallops. Only two layers will bake through evenly. Three hard-boiled eggs chopped and mixed with the top layer of crumbs, makes a nice variation to this dish.

Bouillon is a clear brown meat stock served as soup. It is usually served in cups to keep it hot.

SUGGESTIONS

Peas and Bread—Cut slices of day-old bread rather thick. Scoop out center, being careful not to break or tear. Place in oven and toast to nice brown. Take liquid from can of peas and heat. Blend one tablespoon of flour and one of butter, add water to make smooth like cream. Cook this with liquid until well done. Add peas and fill bread cups and serve hot with any meal. Especially nice with chicken. Crust of bread can be used for dressing with roast meat or saved by placing in oven until nice and brown.

Sparkling Croutets.

To clean stained croutets, half fill with hot soapsuds to which one teaspoonful of baking soda has been added. Drop in some broken egg shells and let stand for one hour, shaking now and then. Rinse with hot water and dry.

Frozen Orange Whip.

Try this on your family. Take one cup sugar, two-thirds cup water, one-quarter cup orange juice, one pint heavy cream, grated rind two oranges.

Boil sugar and water until syrup will thread when dropped from spoon; add grated rind and orange juice. Cover and keep warm for one hour, then cool. Beat cream until stiff and add gradually the orange syrup.

Take two whole oranges, cut in half crosswise and remove pulp and separate into small pieces. Pour juice into brick mold, then put in alternate layers of cream and orange pulp until mold is filled. Adjust cover and pack in salt and ice. Let stand two hours before serving.

FRIED CAKES

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

Beat two eggs very light, add one cup granulated sugar, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon melted butter, one cup sweet milk, nutmeg or vanilla to flavor, one tablespoon baking powder; flour to roll out soft as you can handle. Fry in deep, hot fat.

Kellygrams

BY FRED KELLY

DO YOU NOTICE COLORS?

Considering how much of it there is about us, the average person has a surprisingly scant knowledge of color. We know even less about color than we do about music; yet we see color hundreds of times as often as we hear music.

One may have observed that almost any man looks better in a suit of blue than in any other color. The reason is that the blue of the garment accentuates the combination of yellow and red in the complexion. Blue is the opposite complement of yellow-red. Colors which are opposites neutralize each other if mixed together, but when placed side by side, one enhances and strengthens the other. Hence, whatever color is in the face becomes more noticeable when we wear blue—and as most of us have too little rather than too much color, anything which heightens it helps just that much.

One sometimes wonders why a man in a gray suit often looks as if he were on his way to a hospital. It is because gray reflected against his perhaps already pale complexion makes him look ghastly. White shoes make the feet look larger than black ones, because they reflect more light. It is the same principle as playing a spot-light on the leading lady in a musical comedy.

One could not easily estimate the value of color in business establishments. Sometimes you like a restaurant without knowing why. The answer may lie in the harmonious color scheme. Arthur S. Allen, one of the foremost authorities on the proper selection of color for business uses, was to criticize a show window that contained a display of negligee shirts. Each shirt had been placed against a background of rich purple velvet. Allen inquired:

Which are you trying to sell, the velvet or the shirts? If the shirts, why attract people's eyes away from their modest colors to the brighter-colored velvet?

I distinctly recall that when a small boy, I fell in love with a young woman many years older than myself—chiefly because of her beautiful complexion. I remained in love with her for several days. Then I chanced to see her with her hat off and discovered that her cheeks were drab. The under brim of her hat had been lined with pink!

I wonder how many men make foolish marriages because women are clever at using rouge, lipstick or other color devices to make themselves more attractive than they really are.

How to Achieve Beauty

CARRYING THE SUMMER SPIRIT THROUGH THE YEAR

For everyone summer is a playtime. We have vacations, trips to the country or beach, back-to-nature escapades from civilization and through it all there is the spirit of fun and abandon and activity. Even our work we carry on with more of a play spirit, getting things done without neglecting it.

We get a great deal of exercise and relaxation, which are of untold value from a beauty point of view. Make one of the resolutions for your beauty's New Year to carry this spirit through the winter. One of the best helps is a hobby—some sport you can indulge in all through the year. Swimming is one of the most beneficial pastimes there is, for every muscle in the body is brought into play. Dancing, the indoor gymnasium games, golf, whenever the weather permits, help a great deal to keep you in trim. And to those for whom such outlets are not available, there are always the long walks. Wherever you live, you can find interesting walks. Take them in the spirit of adventure, of exploring new places, or focus your attention on keeping a perfect posture and developing a graceful, rhythmic swing to your gait. Never take your walks in the spirit of punishment of something you have to do whether you want to or not, because then you will unconsciously droop, your gait will lag, and you will lose the great benefits that might be yours.

Consider what type of exercise is most pleasing to you and most easily available. Then make it a positive part of your fall schedule and let nothing interfere with it. You will find that the stimulation to your circulatory system, bringing up the blood to the surface of your skin, is most beneficial in washing away the underlying impurities which gather when the flow is sluggish and are ready to break out in spots and blemishes. Resolve to give your beauty the benefit of this internal massage that can do so much for your looks as well as for your health.

In a single step, Mlle. Evanti, a revue stage beauty, has reached the goal of all vocal artists—the operatic platform. Her voice attracted attention and she was promptly engaged to sing at the Paris opera. Hereafter she will confine her appearances to the opera house.

Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters M.D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

My Dear Followers:

When sending for material which we offer you, please remember to enclose a STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED envelope bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must enclose TEN cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of the publisher. Make them as brief as possible. NOT OVER 200 WORDS, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible, if they are of general interest. Don't forget the STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE if you expect me to send you the information I have offered.—Lulu Hunt Peters.

WE'LL SUE HIM FOR DAMAGES!

"Who is this? Promise you won't tell? Cross your heart? Very well, then—THIS IS THE AUTHOR OF THE BOOK."

This little catechism, followed by the picture of an exceedingly comical-looking, fat woman, ended a recently published (gunny column by H. I. Phillips. It was on counting calories to keep weight down. All of the followers who saw it immediately thought of me and had a good laugh over it, as I did, and many of them sent it to me, for fear I had not seen it.

I know that a lot of you wondered if Phillips had drawn a correct picture of me. No, Zooks. No! I did weigh at one time almost seventy-five pounds more than normal (but not since I wrote the book) and I freely confess to you in the column that occasionally I take a little run up. Last summer, for instance, on my European trip, I gained almost twenty-five pounds, but, honest, I didn't look like that picture!

And while I still harbor ten pounds more than I should, I am tall, and the weight is well distributed, so that I don't look overweight with it. (Says I.) Slowly I'm getting off the ten pounds, by doing just the things I advise you to do—counting calories. And I'm getting all of the elements I need and only omitting the energy foods, which my own excess is supplying. I'm on an average of 1200 C. a day; some days I exceed it, but the next day, I go on a smaller number to even it up.

I was recently chided for not continuing to give menus to my overweight followers, so I'll give you the 1200 C. which I am following today:

Pass on to the next picture—Me, dieting.

Breakfast
2 cups of decaffeinated coffee 90
1 lb. average cream 100
1 1/2 domino cubes of sugar 30
2 cod liver oil tablets 0

(This is my standard breakfast now.)

Dinner
1 cup yeast extract broth 0
(1 cup hot water, 1-2 t. yeast extract)
Raw vegetable salad:
1-2 cup grated raw beets 25C.
1-2 cup grated raw turnips 25
9 leaves lettuce 15
1 heaping t. cottage cheese (no cream) 50
1 t. mineral oil mayonnaise 0

3 ounces fried liver (1 1/2 slices approx. 3x2x1-2) 150
Fried in one-half t. bacon fat 50
1 slice crisp bacon 50
1 small cup mashed summer squash 25
(baked winter squash would be four times as many C.)
1 Roman meal muffin (made from the cereal) 100
10 oz. glass skim or butter-milk 100
1 small orange 50

625

Tea Time
1 toasted water cracker (2 halves) 100
1-4 t. butter 25
1 rounding t. marmalade 35
1 cup tea with 2 t. skim milk 10

170
(I've already had 925 C. That leaves me but 275 for the rest of the day. But I won't be hungry after such a hearty mid-day meal.) At suppertime I shall have 200 C. of fruit (1 large orange and 1 large apple). Before I retire I shall take six ounces of skim milk (60 C.)

The days when I do not have a full level tablespoon butter and some cooked greens, or more cream, I always take one or two cod liver oil tablets to be sure of my vitamin A. I want you to do that, too.

If I were going out to dinner this evening, I would have had my fruit for lunch so that I could have an apparently non-dieting meal for the dinner. But with the dinner, I would have a clear soup (which counts but twenty-five C. to the cup, while a cup of cream soups counts 200) and I would have omitted the bread and potatoes and had fruit for dessert, 100 or so calories. Instead of 300 to 600 C. of pastry or ice cream, etc.

If any of your friends tell me about teacher's looking like Phillips' picture, you swear 'tain't true! 'Tain't!

Tomorrow—Answers to correspondents.

TRAGEDY

"Wouldn't I like to be that lucky girl who danced with the Prince of Wales recently?" remarked a girl in my hearing the other evening. "It would not," I tersely came from the lips of another.

"You know you do not mean that," said the first speaker. "Think of it. To dance with the Prince of Wales, the twentieth century and to make such a hit that he would take you to breakfast of bacon and eggs and then have you included in a day's yachting party. Surely, that girl will have something to tell her grandchildren."

"Well, if you are thinking of bedtime stories for your grandchildren well and good, but as for me, I think it would be a tragedy to be singled out by a man as wonderful as the Prince of Wales is said to be, for a day of bewildered joy and then 'feed on memories for evermore.'"

"Do you suppose that young Canadian girl will ever find in another man the glamour, the personality, the perfection, that seemed to be embodied in England's future king? "I am sure she will not. No other youth would have such a wistful smile as curved the lips of the prince. In no other man's eyes will she see a glance that she could interpret into a longing that must be forever his. Poor girl, although she does not know it yet, she will soon learn that chance set her apart to be the entertainer of a faded youth for a day, and she will have to pay for it with wearing that crown of sorrows the poet has characterized as 'remembering happier things,' the rest of her life.

"No, I am glad it was not I that danced with the prince. I can endow a common, everyday, random variety of men with enough fascination to satisfy me, and then if something parts us I may possibly find another to take his place."

"There aren't many princes. I'll dance and flirt with some American chap, whom I might have a chance of marrying if I wished."

"There you have it," interposed Isabelle Lee. "A woman's first business is to get married and her second—" self fell with a crash. That was almost four years ago, and when I was in the hospital my room was on the third floor and the birds awoke me every morning, sometimes sitting on the foot of my bed, and one even took the liberty to take a bath in a glass of water near my bed. No, indeed, my friends, do away with the old foggy ideas of superstition and you will get more pleasure from life.

"Does anyone know that there is a second?" softly inquired the girl who would hate to dance with the Prince of Wales, if she got a chance.

Thank you so much for your fine letter and also for the kind words about the column. Your letter will do much good, I am sure.

Will L. P., who lives on Route 2, please send me her name as I am sure a letter addressed simply to her initials would prove a puzzle to the postman. I will answer her letter privately as soon as I receive the proper address.

I also have a letter for the woman signing herself "Sad Eyes," who wanted a home. She was living with her son and daughter-in-law and was unhappy. Please send me your name and address at once "Sad Eyes."

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—One of the few things that lingers from the mass of information I had gleaned in grammar school in the mid-west is that Greenwich, Connecticut, is pronounced "Green-itch." Our teacher, in awe-inspiring accents, was wont to warn us of the social leprosy that should be ours, if ever we should pronounce the word "Greenwich" in the hearing of an easterner. Yet I have never heard a trainmaster here, in the cultured east, speak the word other than "Greenwich." Moreover, a great majority of the people with whom I come in contact fall before the same error. So much for the meticulous New Yorker.

The word subway to an Englishman is interpreted as an underground passage for pedestrians. An underground railway is known simply as "the underground." It is this difference in word usage that led to a preposterous, even though true, incident.

A few days ago, a Britisher, his wife and daughter determined to go to Coney Island. They had been in New York but a short time and were numbered among those fortunate beings who had never known the thrill of riding on the subway. Asking a native the quickest way to Coney Island, our Englishman was told to take the subway.

"Topping," he remarked, for he was fond of walking. The three innocents entered a subway kiosk of the B. M. T. at 28th street. Still strong in their faith that the subway was a pedestrian's thoroughfare, they hopped off the platform and proceeded over the ties toward the 24th street station. Midway, a motorman on a southbound express, was astounded to perceive three humans walking towards his speeding train. He jammed on the air brakes, causing a near riot among the passengers, many of whom were still apprehensive of another subway bomb.

Jumping out of his cab, he rushed to the three babes-in-the-subway and guided them away from the third rail. Safe, after a moment in the subway, the naive Englishman expressed his surprise.

"It did seem a bit queer," he vouchsafed, "walking along a dirty, rough pathway like that. But, then, we had been told to go that way, and we followed directions."

It is said that he is now wise enough to wait for a train after his unique experience.

New Yorkers are rabid customers of newspapers. So eager are they to buy their favorite sheets, that 5:30 p. m. finds newspapers dated the following morning on the stands. Evening newspapers are off the press at 6 o'clock in the morning of the day on which they are to appear. This schedule holds good on weekdays, but Sunday is an exception. New Yorkers mourn the absence of the evening newspaper on this day. To fill the gap between the Sunday morning papers and the first edition of Monday morning (which appears at about 5:30 p. m.) a four-page sheet is making its appearance. Each Sunday afternoon, city dwellers are greeted with a blazing headline announcing some startling event. "THOUSANDS KILLED IN BLOODY BATTLE" reads the ribbon line. The following story retails a vivid account of a skirmish between rival Chinese armies. Or "MUSOLINI DECLARES WAR ON US" in the head shrinks to the fact that Italy's premier is solicitous for the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti. I have often noticed that those who buy this paper throw it away in disgust almost immediately after glancing over its contents. They have been deceived by editorial thievery. Yet the next Sunday finds the same suckers offering a perfectly good five-cent piece for details of a preposterous, even though true, incident.

TEN MILLION JAPANESE ADVANCE TOWARD U. S.

Twenty Years '07 - Ago - '27

Common Pleas Court allowed a temporary injunction restraining county commissioners from causing to be erected a school house in sub-district 8 of Beaver Creek Township. Xenia Board of Review composed of C. W. Whitmer, H. J. Farrell and C. E. Arbogast, files report with auditor, showing $105,638 added to personal tax duplicate.

By a rising vote the Rev. E. H. Cherrington was unanimously invited by the Fourth Quarterly conference to return as pastor of the First M. E. Church.

The president of the Star Amusement Company arrived in Xenia with a new picture entitled "The Hypnotist's Revenge." This is the latest picture out and is considered the best ever produced at the Electric Theater tonight.

MOTORMAN GETS HIS MAN

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The fact that Harry Oleski of Brooklyn, was operating a street car, did not stop him from getting the man whom he charged had cheated him out of $1,000. He simply increased speed until he caught up with the car ahead, where the man was sitting, pulled down his trolley, grabbed his victim, and called police. Oleski had been promised a good job by the man if he would put up $1,000 in cash as security. That was the last he had seen of the man and of the $1,000.

CONLEY IS LEADING RESERVE HITTERS; DURNBAUGH WELL UP

"Tug" Conley and Durnbaugh, continuing their hard hitting for the Xenia Reserves, are still leading the regular sluggers in this week's batting averages.

Although Conley's average has suffered somewhat in the last two games, he is maintaining an average of .515 this week while Durnbaugh, whose slugging has been a consistent feature of the Reserves' attack, is hitting at a .430 clip.

A slight drop in the team hitting leaves the club with an average of .331 this week. Batting averages:

PURPLE ROBED DRAGON STILL LIVING IN MINDS OF AWE-INSPIRED INDIANA FOLKS

MANY MEN HIGH IN INDIANA'S POLITICAL LIFE RECEIVED THEIR ORDERS FROM STEVE

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF FLYING GRAND DRAGON WHIZZING THROUGH THE SKY

(The story of Indiana's political drama, now unfolding, and its chief character, D. C. Stephenson, reads like a novel. This is the fifth installment.)

BY BONITA WITT

Staff Writer for Central Press and The Evening Gazette

To many folk in Indiana, D. C. Stephenson, although a life prisoner convicted of murder, remains a bit supernatural. His charges against persons of high and low degree are attracting some of his old group again. He still dazzles. No wonder! He was not supernatural, but a super-dramatist of a political personality that personality always was him.

Numerous persons predict he'll again appear "out of the sky from nowhere" as once he did.

The Stephenson plane, according to Court Asher, his pilot, was a gaily decorated affair with a silvery, forward and three great flaming "K's" painted beneath. In this the grand dragon rode the clouds, as it were.

Thundering over a Klan assembly, he would land, clad in flowing purple robes, a fantastic mask over his face.

Startled crowds would stare in awe. Majestically, the grand dragon would step from the plane to the salutes of lesser dignitaries and supernumeraries. Bombs would burst high in the air.

Women would faint. Men would shout themselves hoarse.

Excited Masses of People

The assemblages were enormous. As the grand dragon strode toward the mass of people, it is related, women tore their way to the shrouded figure, kissed the purple garments, and snatched rings and jewels from their own persons and gave them to the grand dragon.

It was no wonder a man with such a following should begin to dominate politically.

Stories are told of legislators reporting at Stephenson's office before going to the assembly, to receive "do and don't" orders. They were informed which bills the "Old Man" desired passed and which he wanted killed in committee or defeated on the floor, it is said.

Tells of Seeing Politicians Come

An Ohio man, who at one time was friendly with Stephenson, tells of visiting the latter in his Indianapolis office and seeing many men high in Indiana's political life come there to receive their "orders" from the stout little gentleman, who, while still in his early thirties, was enjoying the power of a monarch.

It wasn't exactly safe to describe "Steve" as stout in the old days when he was king, as one former Indianapolis newspaper man can testify. He and the former grand dragon exchanged several blows as the result of an article in which the writer described "Steve" as "a short stout man with rapidly thinning hair."

Perhaps the most notorious bill traced to Stephenson was one requiring the state superintendent of public instruction to prescribe a text book on nutrition for use in the public schools. On its face it appeared to be a fine bill and Stephenson's influence was not even suspected.

What Investigation Disclosed

Shortly after the passage of the bill the "nigger in the woodpile" came to light and it was none other than Stephenson.

New Discovery

Dissolves Freckles

Gone In 4 Days

Here's a new and inexpensive cream called Flyte that is easy to apply—will not stain—yet after you've used it for four days your freckles are all gone—simply melted away.

Women have waited long for a real freckle remover and now they can obtain it at Sayre's Drug Store or any live up-to-date drug-gist anywhere with the distinct understanding that if it fails your money will be returned.

And after your freckles are gone you'll find that your skin has improved—it will be cleaner, clearer and more youthful looking. Ask for a jar of Flyte.

er than D. C. Stephenson! Having taken a mail course in nutrition from a New York concern it was his plan to write the book and reap thousands in royalties, from the pockets of the parents forced to buy the book.

This bill was passed just a few days before Stephenson was arrested for murder and he never realized his ambition. At the last session of the legislature, Attorney General Arthur Gillon, recalling that the law still existed, obtained its repeal.

Admits Stephenson's Power

Indiana politicians today, although reluctant to admit that Stephenson possessed the amount of power which he says he did, in Next Issue.)

confide that he controlled not only state officials but municipal officials and postmasters as well.

Ohio also felt his enthusiasm. Thousands of dollars were spent in Ohio campaigns, but Stephenson never actually gained power there, because he could not give enough time in Ohio to insure complete domination. He had a finger, however, in a goodly number of campaigns, and Ohio was not alone in receiving his personal attention. In most of the twenty-one states in which he was a Klan organizer, Stephenson had a part in things political. But he was to reach his zenith in Hoosierland.

(Another Installment to Follow in Next Issue.)

Farm Notes

OHIO'S PESTS

If Ohio farmers are inclined to be grateful for small favors, they can be grateful that there are still a goodly number of insects and plant diseases that have not reached this country.

During 1926 more than 3000 different species of insects were intercepted at various ports by inspectors employed under the Plant Quarantine Act, according to a report of the Federal Horticultural Board, and plant material infected with more than 3000 different plant diseases was discovered and destroyed.

Had this act gone into effect before 1913, its date of enactment, farmers of Ohio and the nation at large might not be worrying about such pests and diseases as the Japanese beetle, Oriental fruit moth, European corn borer, chestnut blight, citrus canker and white pine blister rust.

Administration of the Plant Quarantine Act is one phase of the regulatory activities of the United States Department of Agriculture and is in charge of W. G. Campbell, director of regulatory work. Under his wing there is also administration of the Meat Inspection Act, the Packers and Stockyard Act, the Grain Futures and Cotton Futures Act, and the Tea Inspection Act.

LONDON MAN FACES HEAVY FINES AFTER PLEADING GUILTY

Pleading guilty to charges of illegal possession of liquor and reckless driving, E. A. Swaney, a garage owner at London, was fined $600 and costs on the first charge and $15 and costs on the second by Probate Judge S. C. Wright, Tuesday.

Swaney admitted being the owner and driver of an automobile which was abandoned by two men on the Jamestown Pike last Friday night when Kenneth C. Barr, county road patrolman, gave chase and also admitted ownership of the three-gallon can of corn liquor in the abandoned car.

Barr, who was in an automobile with Lawrence Clemmer, gave chase to the Swaney car on Lucas Hill, west of the city on the Dayton Pike, when the London machine passed his car at about forty-five miles an hour. The chase continued with the fleeing machine making about sixty miles an hour, to a point on the Jamestown pike, four miles east of the city, where two men abandoned the car leaving the motor running and escaped through a corn field.

The automobile and liquor were confiscated and held by Sheriff Ohmer Tate. The car, which is worth about $200, will be sold by the sheriff.

Swaney was identified through license plates on the automobile and was picked up in London. He was brought to Xenia Tuesday by Barr. Swaney said that it was his first plunge into bootlegging, and that he had decided to take a chance at it in order to get funds to finance his business.

Swaney furnished bond to secure payment of the fine.

NICKEL LIMIT!

That's All Smokers Need to Pay for an Ace-high Good Cigar. Read the Glad News

Some men laugh when you say "a good five-cent" cigar and spring the old one about what this country needs. Some men think of the good old days. Others say "Show me." Maybe you're one of the skeptics. If you are, we want you to put yourself in the "show me" class. We say there is a good cigar selling at 5c right in this town today. And here's the way to prove it.

Just step into the nearest cigar store, plunk down one nickel and take a Havana Ribbon fresh from the box. No more hunting for a good cigar at five cents. No more disappointments. You'll sign up for life with Havana Ribbon then and there, and forget about the price.

Havana Ribbon is a good cigar because it's made of carefully chosen ripe tobacco. And it's made in one of the most modern cigar factories in the world. Don't let a nickel stand between you and a real smoke treat.

PUPILS OF FLYING TEACHER TELL HOW THEY ADMIRE HER

Jones, "Everybody felt bad when she left, even the babies." (Later information revealed that all folk not yet advanced to the fifth grade are "babies.")

"Miss Doran promised to send us a postcard from the place where her airplane was going," continued Geraldine. "I wouldn't be a bit surprised if some day we get a postcard saying she wasn't lost at all but just decided to visit China or some place."

The girls recalled how excited they were that day after school toward the end of the term in June when Miss Doran told them that she had a "secret" for them, that she was going to fly to Hawaii. It was a small place and the publicity it has received since has dazzled the little town; nevertheless, it urged Miss Doran not to take the trip. She was requested to stay with the school.

Wanted Her for Higher Grade.

"We fifth graders wanted Miss Doran to teach the sixth grade next year so we would have her again," confided Marjorie Moore, 10. "But Miss Doran wanted to make the trip and she had a right to go if she wanted to, didn't she?"

The children have been haunting Caro's main street, looking for the latest editions of city papers that come to town, always hoping Doran is there. "For example, asserted that Miss Doran was alive but very hungry."

Betty Meyers, 10, has been most optimistic. "She'll be all right," Betty has assured herself and chums "What if the old plane did fall into the ocean. You know what a good swimmer Miss Doran is."

The boys haven't been as talkative as the girls but they have asserted that "Miss Doran is smart enough to save herself."

The boy Miss Doran probably liked the best of all, nine-year-old Robert Brabey, who used to stay after school to help the teacher straighten up desks, perhaps has not heard of her fate. He has been passing his vacation in the Michigan hinterland, far from towns and newspapers.

No Successor Chosen.

No successor to the flying school teacher has been picked by the school board and the small, neat room where Miss Doran held forth has been kept spotless by the custodian who has been one of the optimists regarding her fate.

Except for a calendar brought back from Flint, her home town, by Mrs. Doran there is no decoration in the bare little room with its irregular row of desks.

Miss Doran's effects were removed as she did not expect to return to Caro in the autumn regardless of the outcome of her flight. She intended to pass a year in California following her flight. Her only promise to the children was that she would come back to visit them all some day.

And they have been certain that she would. For she never broke a promise.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

Peter's Adventures

SNAKE'S THREE FIRST COUSINS

"Tortoise, turtle! Turtle, tortoise!" Peter was puzzled. "Why, I thought they were one and the same thing," said he. Jack-in-the-Box slowly shook his head.

"No, siree! A Tortoise and a turtle are two different things."

"Turtle are not just alike—not by any means. And Terrapin—why, I almost forgot to mention him!" "Hum! Terrapin! Seems to me I have heard that name before."

"Who is he?" "Another one of my relatives who is much like me and yet quite different," replied Jack-in-the-Box, and grinned. I could tell you a story if I wanted to, a story of three cousins and what happened to them when they went to seek their fortunes, but I daresay you wouldn't care to hear it."

"And I daresay you are very much mistaken!" declared the boy. "For I certainly should! Who were the three cousins, and where did they live?" "Tortoise, Turtle and Terrapin!" answered Jack-in-the-Box, promptly, and looking much pleased to think the Two-Legs really did want him to go on with his tale. "And I don't know where they lived, 'twas so many years ago, but I am quite sure 'twas some place that was quite suited to a reptile—warm, you know, and sunny, I—"

Peter interrupted Jack-in-the-Box. "A reptile!" cried he. "Why should the three cousins choose to live with the reptiles? Light! Snakes! I don't like snakes. Creepy, crawling things! They make me shiver!" "Some snakes are very handsome!" said he. "Though none of them are to be trusted! But it would never do for me or my cousins to say much about a Snake—it would be like a stone calling a rock hard! Too much alike, you know!"

"Why?" asked the boy. "Because I am a reptile, and so is cousin!" Jack-in-the-Box wagged his head and chuckled in glee at Peter's dismay. "Yes, siree!" Tortoise, Turtle and Terrapin are Snake's three first cousins."

Next—"An Unpopular Crowd."

WHISKERS, CUPID, BOTH WIN ALLENTOWN, Pa.—George Onuffer stood up before Judge Lobst, in domestic relations court here and swore that he loved his Valentino sideburns much too passionately to shave them off. He loved his wife, too, he declared, but if he had to choose between his wife and his whiskers, he would stick by the whiskers, against which the youthful Mrs. Onuffer had entered a vigorous protest. Judge Lobst told them: (a) not to be silly, (b) to kiss, and (c) to make up.

WOMEN APPROACHING MIDDLE AGE

Pass Through This Trying Period in Good Condition by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MRS. HARVEY TUCKER
R. R. 9, SHELLVILLE, IND.

"Grow old along with me,
The best is yet to be"

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women of middle age, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Those who have learned through their own experience the merit of this dependable medicine are enthusiastic in recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

"I had been in bad condition for three months. I could not do my work. One day I read what your medicine had done and just had a feeling that it would help me, so I sent and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had only taken half a bottle when I got up and started to do my work. It gave me an appetite, and helped me wonderfully. I can not praise this medicine highly enough. I surely will advise all women and girls to take it, and they don't have to use rouge to look healthy. My two daughters are taking it now and one is also using the Sanative Wash. I am willing to have you use this testimonial and I will answer letters from women asking about the medicine."—Mrs. HARVEY TUCKER, R. R. No. 9, Shellville, Indiana.

"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the little books you give away and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel better and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I feel like a different person. At anytime that I don't feel good I take the Vegetable Compound again, as I always keep a bottle on hand. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me."—Mrs. JEN-NE TUCKER, 611-11th St., Union City, N. J.

Sally's Shoulders

by BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," ETC.

READ THIS FIRST:

SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who does not live with her mother. Mrs. JEROME enjoys poor health, so Sally does the housework, mends and office work for Mr. PEVEY, down town afternoon. Her brother, BEAU, and sister, MILLIE, give little towards the support of the home, and the financial burden falls heavily upon Sally.

In the flat below the Jeromes lives TED SLOAN, who wants Sally to marry him and keep on working. But the only man who interests her is JOHN NYE, whose real estate office is across the hall from Mr. Pevey's. Mrs. Miller, his secretary and business ally, is infatuated with her. Millie fights with the notion of marrying him, but really prefers DAVIDSON, a bond salesman, whom she met in a former job.

Now comes some bad checks, and "horror" some money from the bank where he works. Sally gets the money to make good his theft from Mr. Pevey, who is retiring from business because of ill health. Beau and his wife, MABEL, having spent all their earnings for such luxuries as second-hand cars and fur coats, return home to live. They pay almost no board, and Sally is frantic.

Then Millie has an appendicitis operation, and John Nye says for her room and nurse at the hospital. While she is there Sally does her work in Nye's office, and he offers her a permanent position. She refuses it, and goes into the restaurant business with her aunt, EMILY J.E. POMME, who has turned her country home into a wayside inn. The business does not thrive and Sally spends most of her time at the inn, where she and Aunt Emily do all the work of cooking, serving, etc. Mrs. Jerome decides to bring the whole family there to live, and despite Aunt Emily's protests, does so.

Aunt Em hires a jazz band and tries to compete with "The Lark," a nearby roadhouse. But business is no better. One Sunday afternoon John Nye drops in, and tells Sally that if she and her aunt go to work for him again, Sally refuses, although business is bad. Ted Sloan suggests to her that she do some exhibition dancing as an attraction to draw the crowds.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER XLV

LONG after the chugging sound of Ted's little roadster had died away in the distance, Sally sat staring at the night-time stillness of Aunt Emily's garden.

Ted had left her with a promise to take her to "The Lark" on the next night to see the Spanish dancers who were drawing the crowds there.

But it was not of Ted she was thinking, she was on the stairs, with the dark, perfumed weight of the lilac branches above her and a white moon shining down through the lace-work of leaves.

It was the kind of May night when a woman is very likely to find herself thinking of the man she loves—or of the man she loved once upon a time—or of the man whom she is going to love but never yet has happened to meet.

And so Sally found herself thinking of John Nye, and of something he had said to her that afternoon when they stood together in Aunt Emily's reception room, with its old polished furniture, its dim silver mirrors, its Tolly lugs and Bristol glass.

"You belong here—not in an office," was what he had said to her.

He did not look upon her, then, as a human adding machine or a piece of office furniture, after all, Sally reflected. He saw that she was a real flesh and blood girl—the kind that fitted in among mirrors and priceless old glass and bowls of blue and lavender lilacs. The thought was oddly warming and comforting to her.

"And he said he missed me, too," she went on thinking, as she rose and started up the steps.

But then, that was just because she had sharpened his pencils, and written his letters carefully, and brought him sandwiches when he was hungry. She had done the same things for Mr. Pevey, always. It was part of her job to do them—all but the sandwiches, of course.

She closed the hall door behind her and stepped into the house.

It was dark, for Aunt Emily went around these days switching off lights the minute they were not needed. She wasn't wasting a penny in this last effort to make a "go" of her dying business.

But in the reception room there was a small grate fire that sent out a sweet, smoky smell to mingle with the perfume of the lilacs.

"You're never going to dance for those hoodlums!" gasped Mrs. Jerome.

petted or stroked when she needed pitying and petting and stroking. She was something of a chatterbox, was Aunt Em.

"Oh, the business is going to the dogs!" she said now, and her voice was snappy. "We're losing about twice as much as we're making—and I don't know why. Our food wouldn't be better, and the place is more comfortable than any other place I know. I should have stuck to school teaching, I reckon. The only thing I know how to do is to write letters on a blackboard to a piece of chalk." She was silent once more.

"Our place lacks pep!" said Sally, remembering the very words of Ted's sales talk. "We need something different—something like those Spanish dancers that the Lark has—"

"Spanish dancers?" snapped Aunt Em in disgust. "Where would we find any Spanish dancers? I'd like to know. And how could we afford them if we could find them? I'm about flat broke, Sally Ann, as it is."

It was at that exact second that Sally made an all-important decision. In the darkness her big blue eyes lighted up and the sparkle of gold adventure shone in her face suddenly.

"I'll do it!" she said to herself. "I probably won't come to anything—but I'll try it anyway!"

She spoke aloud to Aunt Emily, with a friendly hand on her shoulder. "Come on upstairs, Aunt Em. I've a grand idea, but I won't tell you about it just yet."

"I'm afraid of grand ideas," answered Aunt Em in the tones of Gloomy Gus. "My grandest idea was to open this restaurant and see what a flat failure I've made of it."

She switched on the hall light and started up the stairs.

Sally followed slowly, looking over her shoulder at her reflection in the big mirror on the east wall of the hallway.

As she looked she began to move her shoulders in the most graceful, delicate way possible—a beautiful movement when done properly and modestly, as Sally did it. The movement that is vulgarly known all over the world as "the shimmy!"

And as she did it she winked solemnly at herself in the glass.

Millie was sitting up in bed, waiting for her.

She had a large mirror propped against a mound of lace-covered pillows in front of her, and she was brushing her golden hair.

"How would you like me with my hair this way?" she asked, twisting it into a flat, shining coil at the nape of her neck. "Don't you think it's nice?"

"Very," answered Sally. "What did you want to talk to me about, Millie?"

very pleasant kind of people. . . . Now we're out for the crowd! The more the merrier!"

"I asked you if you were going to dance downstairs for those people!" repeated Mrs. Jerome with a terrible look.

Sally nodded, tossing her hair back from a satin forehead. "I certainly am!" she said. "And so's Ted Sloan! We're going to do it every night for a while, and see what happens!"

"You're no daughter of mine!" her mother said, after a long and awful pause. "You're just like your father and your Aunt Em. Wild as a goat!"

Her face crumpled up as if she were going to cry. But Sally stole her heart against that pathetic look.

She was going through with this thing! She hated it, but she was going to go through with it! Right to the end, whatever that end might be. It was the only thing to be done, and she was going to do it, by Jimmy Jinks.

The World And All

MISUNDERSTANDINGS

Most heartbreaks come from misunderstandings. Most hatreds between man and man arise out of a lack of full expression and calm consideration of the points of view of two or more persons.

So little do we know about the souls of one another that we are constantly making one another unhappy, without any deliberate desire to do so.

Think over your own experiences. Are you not frequently misunderstanding others, and being misunderstood by others?

In divorce court, in suits at law, and in criminal cases, the word that keeps constantly popping up is "misunderstanding."

And what is a misunderstanding? Let's see whether we can come at it in a way that will cover all misunderstandings.

I think a misunderstanding between two persons is a failure of one or both to see clearly what is in the mind and in the soul of the other.

We do not know one another, largely because of the difficulty we have in expressing ourselves.

Persons who are not very well acquainted do not have as many misunderstandings as those who are more or less closely in touch with one another. The reason is that chance acquaintances have little interest in what is in one another's minds. They do not expect to understand, so they do not understand. The person who has few intimate relations with fellow men is apt to get through the world with the fewest misunderstandings. But also, he will have the fewest misunderstandings. He will miss the sweet along with the bitter.

Lovers, life mates and business associates have the most serious misunderstandings.

Lovers because they do not know one another's language well and are timid about saying what they think to one another.

Husband and wife misunderstand one another because they don't talk their difficulties out calmly and fully.

Business partners and associates get into corners because they are not quite frank in telling each other that each has interests of his own, and that neither one can own or completely control any other one in the world of business.

At the root of most misunderstanding is the lack of full and complete expression on both sides. Either the parties to the misunderstanding cannot or will not express themselves fully. Its best to say it out, rather than let the venom accumulate and ferment into hatred.

On Tuesday morning Sally drove to town in Aunt Emily's little car and returned at noon with several small packages that she carried straight to her own room.

On Tuesday afternoon at dusk Mrs. Jerome opened the door of it and came in.

"I wonder if you would make me a cup of coffee, Sally," she began, and then stopped talking and made a queer little chucking sound in her throat.

Sally was sitting on the edge of the bed, winding a long yellow satin ribbon around one of her slender legs. And upon the ribbon dozens and dozens of tiny gilt bells were sewed. They tinkled merrily as the ribbon moved under Sally's slender little fingers.

"Whatever tomfoolery are you up to now?" asked Mrs. Jerome, mystified.

Sally gave a wild giggle. "I'm about to become 'Bella,' the belle of the ballroom dance," she said, looking up at her mother from under her thick, upcurling lashes. Her face was adorable with mischief and laughter.

A light slowly dawned in Mrs. Jerome's heavy, pale face.

The Theater

The "foreign invasion" of the American movies isn't a foreign invasion at all, but just the international exchange of ideas. This is the answer of Conrad Veidt, noted European cinema performer, now in the United States making pictures, to those who fear that the present influx of foreign stars to the American screen will tend to "Europeanize" our films.

"It is impossible to try and confine the motion picture to any locality or to any one country," says Veidt.

Veidt is one of the best known character actors on either continent. He was born in Berlin and got his early training under the great Max Reinhardt.

Louise Dresser has been signed to appear in support of Corinne Griffith in her next picture.

Oriental will just throng Gilda Grey's next. Both Anna May Wong, the petite Asiatic and Sojin, another Oriental, have roles in it. There'll also be a lot of lamas, Tibetan peasants, etc.

Tom Mix has made sixty-seven pictures for one producing concern which ought to be some sort of a championship.

Lois Moran has finally had her hair bobbed. After many of Hollywood's shorn beauties have returned to longer locks.

As Menelaos, husband of the beautiful but erratic Helen of Troy, Lewis Stone will appear sans the Stone mustache. Maria Corda is Helen.

IDAH MCGLONE GIBSON

By Idah McGlone Gibson
Best Known and Best Beloved Newspaper Woman in America

Mrs. Gibson says women of today are more interested in personality—the thing that Elinor Glynn called "It"—that intangible thing we know as charm.

The young girl wants the truth told about her. She is not satisfied with the "My Dear, be your own dear modest little self, and you will capture the young man of your choice" for she has learned to her sorrow that the girls who get their pick among the eligible men are not the modest violets. The slogan today is—"Be Yourself"—which means do not lie to yourself. Personality plus can be acquired; but to acquire it one must have a sense of beauty, a flare for style, a great sympathy and a good deal of self-confidence without egotism. "I Have Said in My Heart" is a clearing house for woman's ideas and ideals. Mrs. Gibson's articles are not preachments—something that some narrow minded person of old fashioned ideas thinks the young girl should be. Instead they are truth as it comes from the heart of the thinking modern woman who is marching on and not standing still a moment.
